UO Faculty Member to Attend Portland Weekend Conference

A large number of representatives from the University will attend the conference of the Pacific Northwest Council of the Guidance and Personnel Association Friday and Saturday at the Multnomah Hotel in Portland.

The program has been arranged by a committee headed by Karl W. Onthank, graduate placement director. Donald DuShane, director of student affairs, is a vice-president of the association and will preside over one of the sessions. J. V. Berreman, professor of sociology, will speak in a session on school and college marriages, and Ray Hawk, director of men's affairs, will report on the national meeting of the Association of Deans and Advisers of Men.

Speaking in the session on testing and measuring programs will be J. Spencer Carlson, counseling center director. James D. Kline, foreign student adviser, will chair the discussion group of foreign students. Others planning to attend the meeting are Mrs. Golda P. Wickham, director of women's affairs, Leona Tyler, associate professor of psychology, and Clifford L. Constance, registrar.

Loyalty Oaths Result In Disapproval

By Herb Vorenberg

The loyalty oath as applied to faculty members has long been a controversial subject. When the University of California recently forced all faculty members to sign the oath, many resigned, and some were fired for not signing. The Emerald recently ran a column composed of reactions to the oaths at other universities, so today's question is: "Do you think members of the University of Oregon faculty should be required to sign loyalty oaths?"

Norm Olds, junior in business: "Yes, I think they should sign the oaths. After all, what have they got to hide?"

Patty McKy, freshman in liberal arts: "No, I think the oaths are against all our democratic rights. However, action should be taken against any professor who teaches communistic doctrines in such a way as to influence students to follow these principles."

Don Paar, freshman in speech: "I really don't think such oaths are needed. I haven't noticed any professor yet with any socialistic or communistic tendencies."

David Salholm, senior in business: "No, I don't think so, unless there are specific instances where professors are teaching communism and encouraging students to 'join the party.'"

Keith Stewart, freshman in liberal arts: "No, I don't think it is right to question the integrity of private life of a faculty member, unless he allows his outside activities to influence his teaching."

Wayne Carothers, freshman in business: "I think that forcing these oaths here would be stupid. In the first place, asking a person if he is a communist wouldn't prove anything. If he is a communist he would only deny it. Secondly, I think a loyalty oath would only tend to drive any communistic action underground, which, instead of improving the situation, would only make it harder to cope with."

State Social Test Set This Month In Washington

State merit examinations will be given this month for beginning level and professional social work positions in Washington state.

Starting salaries for positions requiring no experience are $227 and $249, while higher level professional jobs start from $273 and $343.

Opportunities are available for Junior Visitors in the public assistance program and for training positions in child welfare work.

Students interested in taking these examinations should file applications by next Thursday. No other examinations will be held before the school year closes, according to Harold Lang, State Personnel Board supervisor.

Application forms and further information may be secured from the student placement office or the State Personnel Board, 1209 Smith Tower, Seattle 4, Wash.

Special Student Rate Offered

A special student rate of $230 round trip transportation by ship from New York to Le Havre, France, is offered through the Council on Student Travel for students wishing to tour Europe during July and August.

Specially-fitted American-built ships carrying 1,300 passengers will make the trip in nine days. During the voyage, special orientation courses in languages and European culture, at no cost, will be given. Leaving either from Montreal or New York, sailings are in June and early July with return in late August and early September.

The unusually low fare is made possible by special arrangement with a refugee organization, which is using the ships to bring displaced persons from Europe to Canada. All interested persons should write Robert L. Tesdell, Council on Student Travel, 53 Broadway, New York City.

Fahlman Named Acting SU Publicity Chairman

Clyde Fahlman, sophomore in sociology, was named acting chairman of the Student Union publicity committee by the SU Board Wednesday.

Fahlman replaces Dick Olsen, senior in business, who resigned because of other responsibilities.

awards. The Order of the O discussed this question earlier this week, but the members failed to reach an agreement.

A similar situation existed in the spring of 1947. Awards for golf and tennis were under consideration. It finally was decided to give no minor awards and to give letters only to those who demonstrate hard work as well as ability.

Whether or not this policy will apply to skiing has not been determined. President Mountain recently stated that he had discussed the matter with the ASUO Executive Council and that "we realize that skiing is in the embryo stage and in order to continue to make it a major sport at the University, the Executive Council is going to do all in their power to promote and encourage the continuance of the ski team."

"One of the possible ways of encouraging skiing at the University of Oregon," he added, "is to award varsity letters to those men who have proven themselves to be top skiers and qualifying as such for a varsity award."

Mountain concluded, "I know that they will be able to make a very fine showing this weekend at the Sugar Bowl in California . . . and through their efforts in this meet, we hope that the decision of awarding letters will be made easier." We hope so, too.
