

Rotary Convention Hears Morse Speak At SU Banquet

Senator Wayne L. Morse would not give the President arbitrary power to send troops where he wants to without the consent of Congress.

Nor would the junior senator from Oregon let the military exercise its power in the field of international diplomacy.

That's what Senator Morse, former dean of the Oregon law school, told the second annual conference of Rotary International at a banquet in the Student Union Monday night. The Rotarians will wind up their three day meeting on the campus today.

"The Great Debate cannot be solved until the Administration realizes that Congress, through a system of checks and balances, will have government by law rather than by the arbitrary caprice of men," Morse declared.

He explained that the so-called Great Debate covered two issues—military manpower, and the power of the President to implement the Atlantic Pact.

Emphasizing that he is a constitutional liberal, Morse said "even the war power does not remove constitutional limitations safeguarding essential liberty."

He said President Truman recently told a press conference that he could send troops where he wished under the provision of the Atlantic Pact. If Congress didn't like it, the President said he would take this issue to the people, the Republican senator told the Rotarians.

"I think this issue should be taken to the people," Morse declared, "and I also think the President would take a shellacking on this question of sending troops where he wants without the consent of Congress."

Morse said there is no question about the President's inherent power to protect American lives in case of immediate emergency, but "this doesn't deny the right of Congress to review the exercising of that authority."

The speaker said "we must have recognition on the part of the Administration that real cooperation and consultation is needed now."

"In my opinion, the result of the Great Debate shows a breakdown of relations between the two ends of Pennsylvania Avenue," he added, "and some steps taken by the Administration have cost the confidence of a great many men in Congress."

It was announced at the banquet that William Ball of Bend is the new governor of this Rotary district.

Morse was introduced by former Governor Charles Sprague of Salem.

Tri Delta to Offer Scholarships to Two

Application blanks for the Delta Delta Delta scholarships are now available in the office of the director of women's affairs, Emerald Hall, and are due in that office Monday.

Two awards are given by the local chapter of the sorority: a $350 grant to a woman who will be a junior next year, and a $250 award to a woman who will be a senior next year.

The scholarships are awarded at the All-Campus Sing during Junior Weekend.

Money for the scholarships is earned largely through baby-sitting by the individual members of the chapter.

Only Slight Increase In Freshman Class

A slightly larger freshman class, not the highest college enrollment in history, is expected next year, Director of Men's Affairs Ray Hawk told the Emerald Monday.

Hawk had been quoted as saying the highest enrollment in history is expected as a result of the new draft deferment policy. He asserted Monday that it was his intention to say that it is possible that a larger freshman class would enroll because of a higher birth rate after the first years of the depression. Men's enrollment, since many will be deferred under the new policy, will be about the same in the freshman class, he said.

Hawk emphasized that the new draft policy does not exempt college men from military service, but merely delays the period of service.
