

'Anne of the Thousand Days' Stages Full Dress Rehearsal

The cast of "Anne of the Thousand Days" swings into full rehearsals tonight with the May 18 opening just nine days away.

Here begins the ticklish business of polishing and primping, bringing unity out of disorganization, working on the weak points, and, in general, producing a good play. Director Fred Hunter and assistant director Phyllis Keller will be in charge of this perfecting.

Among the stalwarts of the cast who will soon become familiar with every square foot of the University Theatre's stage are the play's two principal characters, Henry VIII and Anne Boleyn, better known to us as Bob Marsh and Avis Lange.

Avis Lange is Portland's latest contribution to dramatics at the University. An alumnus of Lincoln High School, medium-sized, brown-haired Avis, a first term sophomore, was becoming a veteran stagehand long before the first ground had been broken for the new University Theater.

Miss Lange spent three years with the Portland Junior Civic Theater, the young partner of one of the Northwest's best and most widely known amateur theater groups. She has also been a functionary in the Lewis and Clark

Summer theater, playing the lead in "Hotel Universe," and "Craig's Wife," and filled in on many other minor roles. Finally Avis has put in time with the Redlands, Calif. Civic Theater group.

Earlier this year Avis was Amelia in the Shakespearian production "Othello."

Bob Marsh, graduate assistant in speech, from San Diego, fills the role of the talented but ruthless 16th century English ruler. This is Marsh's first part at the University Theater, but he is no stranger of the works of Maxwell Anderson. Bob had the role of Lord Essex in "Elizabeth, the Queen," another of Anderson's English historical dramas while at San Diego State College where he graduated in 1950.

This will be both Bob's first and last year at the University. He plans to enroll at Florida State University next year and work for his Ph.D. He is very interested in theater work and aims for the field of directing.

Like Avis, Bob has also done his share of community theater work. He spent quite some time with his home town San Diego group and was principally in the technical end of production.

Speech Luncheon Today

Three speech 113 classes of Robert Montgomery will hold a noon luncheon today at the Anchorage Cafe. Lunch will begin at 12 noon, and there will be one person from each class delivering an after-dinner speech.

Mistress of Ceremony will be Shirley Boner.

The board intends to publish a booklet containing all school yells, Miss Fitzmaurice said, which will be sold for 10 cents a copy. She also told the council that a rally has been planned for Sept. 13, the Thursday before Oregon's opening football game with Stanford in Portland. The board has suggested that the present yell squad be maintained for the first rally.

Anderson told the council that $1.62 per visitor had been returned to groups who housed students during the weekend.

Following Anderson's report the council voted to recommend to the Senate that an ex-officio advisory board composed of the vice-presidents of the International Fraternity Council, the Inter-Dormitory Council, Panhellenic, the Inter-Hall Governing Board, and Freshman class president work with a Duck Preview chairman to be selected by the Senate from the general student body early in fall term.

Future plans of the Rally Board were presented to the Executive Council by Joanne Fitzmaurice.

A yell writing contest will be sponsored by the Rally Board this month, Miss Fitzmaurice said. A prize of $5 will be offered for the best football yell written by a University woman and an identical award will be presented to the winning man.
