

UO Faculty Men to Assist With OSC Alcohol Study

A two-week program of alcohol study will be presented at Oregon State College this summer to acquaint interested persons with recent scientific developments related to alcohol beverage problems.

On the staff of the study program will be University faculty men Joel V. Berreman, professor of sociology; W. S. Laughlin, assistant professor of anthropology; and Victor P. Morris, dean of the School of Business Administration.

Provide Broad Background

The curriculum is designed to provide a broad background on the problem of beverage alcohol and will also deal with education, legal and social controls, traffic, and society responsibilities.

The summer session will be open to all persons engaged in activities in which a knowledge of the problems of alcohol would be useful. A college or university education or equivalent experience will be required of applicants.

Scholarships Available

Tuition will be $21, payable in advance. A number of scholarships are available to interested persons.

Students who are working toward an advanced degree may earn three hours of either graduate or undergraduate credit by taking the alcohol study course.

Further information may be obtained by writing to W. K. Ferrier, Oregon School of Alcohol Studies, 810 Dekum Building, 519 S. W. 3rd Ave., Portland 4, Ore.

Amphibs Give Swim Pageant

By Kathleen Fraser

A smoothly-staged water show was put on Thursday night and Wednesday night by the Amphibians, women's swimming group, in the men's pool.

Following a theme of "Swimming Down to Rio," the first group of numbers were under the general heading of "North of the Border, and included "Manhattan Serenade," complete with a Manhattan Tower floating in the middle of the pool. "Starlight Trails" followed next and was unique in the lighting and spangled caps of the swimmers.

Two well-coordinated swimming sextets rounded out the first part of the program with "St. Louis Blues" and "New Orleans by Night."

"South of the Border"

The group moved "South of the Border" with a Mexican Hat Dance by Nancy Morse and "La Cumparsita." The later was a trio composed of Joan Skordahl, Miriam Jones, and Cathy Vilas and featured perfectly timed front surface dives and back dolphins. A group number, "Mayan Melody" highlighted smooth formation swimming with paddle boards.

Cathy Vilas and Shirley Smart teamed in the "Carioca" which was outstanding in its timing and performance.

Skordahl Performs Solo

"Adios Muchachos" featured pleasing swimming by a mixed double quartet composed of Janet Nunn, Cynthia Price, Ashle Dixon, Joan Walker, Pete Van Dyke, Jim Allen, Yoshino Bu Terada, and Allen Wakinekona, Jr. "When Day is Done" rounded out the program and featured the entire Amphibian group swimming to the light of sparklers. Joan Skordahl performed a solo in the number to close the program.

The four men who joined the group also provided intermission entertainment. Complete with oddly assorted swimming attire, they cavorted about the pool and high board.

Staging of the water show was done by the club members under the direction of their adviser, Miss Jeannette Masilionis.

Wave to Interview Senior Women

Senior women interested in the regular navy as a career will be interviewed by Lieut. D. N. Field of the United States Waves Thursday and Friday at the graduate placement service. Appointments may be made at the placement office.

College graduates or those in their senior year who expect to graduate this June are eligible to apply for commissions as an officer in the regular navy.

Women who are appointed receive commissions as line ensigns. An indoctrination five months in length at the General Line School at Newport, R.I. begins their careers. Junior officers, upon graduation from this course, are sent to duty at a naval shore activity.

Cerf's Impression Of Oregon Visit Told In Column

Oregon and the University as seen by popular humorist Bennett Cerf appears in his column "Trade Winds" in the May 5 issue of the Saturday Review of Literature.

Cerf, writer, publisher, and compiler of anthologies, spoke at the University Feb. 28, on a tour of Oregon when he hit Oregon State, Salem, and Portland.

"Oregon State at Corvallis and the University of Oregon at Eugene are only 40 miles apart," Cerf says in his article, "and of course the rivalry is intense."

His guides when he first arrived on the UO campus were W. A. Dahlberg, associate professor of speech, and Ernest Moll, professor of English. Recounting their meeting, Cerf called them "two of the most interesting gentlemen I've met in years."

"The Oregon School of Journalism has become one of the best in the country and has placed its graduates with leading newspapers and advertising agencies," Cerf observed.

He concludes his column with a well-anecdoted account of his visit in Salem and Portland.

Mothers' Weekend this year than in 1950, Miss Jacobs pointed out. This year 366 women's and 323 men's mothers registered, as compared to the 1950 figures of 280 men's mothers and 400 women's mothers.

Mrs. L. O. Meisel, Eugene, was elected president of the Oregon Mothers at the organization's business meeting following the annual mother's breakfast Saturday.

Oberteuffer, Oswego, financial secretary; Mrs. Stacia Mac Alear, McMinnville, corresponding secretary; and Karl Ontank, director of the University placement service, executive secretary.

In addition to the annual breakfast mothers heard the All-Campus Sing, attended the Junior Weekend luncheon, viewed the Float Parade and the Junior Prom, and were entertained at dinner by individual living organizations Sunday.

'Killers of the Dream' Reviewed by Berreman

"Killers of the Dream" is an attempt to psychoanalyze the Southern people and their traditions, J. V. Berreman, professor of sociology, said Tuesday night in discussing Lillian Smith's book in the Library Browsing Room at the Student Union.

Importance of the book was noted by Berreman in two ways:

1. The book is written by a Southerner.
2. What the book says; it is an insight into Southern attitudes.

Lillian Smith "aims at accounting for things the way that they are," Berreman stated. "Killers of the Dream" delves into the history of the South, before the Civil War and after, in order to understand the conflict Southerners are faced with."

The Southerner has a guilt complex through contradictions. Southern tradition blocks honesty, the professor said in quoting Miss Smith.

Segregation Break Slow

The breaking of segregation is coming slowly with various movements by Southern women. Miss Smith, according to Berreman, says that Southern women face humility in two ways:

1. Through the parental role, in which mothers must turn over the love of their children to Negro servants.

2. Through the sharing of their husbands with Negro women. For compensation, the white man has elevated the white woman to an exaggerated respect. She is an idol that is not loved as a human being, Berreman stated.

For revenge, the white women of the South have organized movements for non-segregation in church, education, and in the abolition of "Jim Crow" laws, the professor noted.

For the last 15 years, the white man and the Southern tradition have been on the defense, Berreman said. The South realizes its supremacy is gone, and the final theme of "Killers of the Dream" is this struggle to emerge from confusion.

"Segregation is the denial of the rights of human dignity," Berreman quoted Miss Smith.

Communists are winning because they say, "Comrade, just call me by my first name." Democracy should cultivate calling the Negro "Mr." instead of "Boy," Berreman said.

Discussion of Berreman's talk followed, directed by Miss Leona Tyler, associate professor of psychology. Carl W. Hintz, head of the University Library, introduced Berreman. The talk was the sixth in the Lecture-Forum series.

Heads of Houses

Members of Heads of Houses will meet at 4 p.m. today in the Student Union to vote on committee recommendations concerning the "Oregon Plan," proposed freshman living program.

The committee was appointed last Monday by President Barbara Williams after the group rejected the plan as a whole. If the recommendations are approved they will be sent to the ASUO Executive Council, Miss Williams said.

The committee will meet again at noon today to complete its recommendations.

Last Day to Make Fireside Reservations

Today is the last day to make reservations for the faculty fireside to be held Tuesday evening at the home of R. C. McCall, head of the speech department.

A limited number are still available. Anyone wishing to attend should call the YWCA office in Gerlinger Hall.

"The Battle of the Human Mind" will be the discussion topic, which, according to McCall, will cover the battle for ideas, in opposition to battles for material things.

Students attending the fireside, one of a series which have been sponsored by the YM-YWCA to foster better instructor-student relations, are to meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Gerlinger. Transportation to McCall's home will be provided.
