Heads of Houses Presents 'Plan' Revisions to Council

by Marge Elliott

Heads of Houses, a council composed of the presidents of all women's living organizations, unanimously accepted the recommendation of a committee that was recently appointed to study the Oregon plan.

Previously Heads of Houses defeated the Oregon plan as a whole in a 22 to 5 vote.

The Oregon plan was formulated last month by a group of students who studied living-in and orientation programs at Stanford University and then incorporated some of the Stanford program to suit the University's dormitory situation.

Recommendations from the Heads of Houses were written up in the form of a letter and sent to the Executive Council to be discussed at their meeting last night. Consolidated Freshmen Units

Heads of Houses approved consolidated freshmen units, but questioned the idea of freshman dormitories. It was the feeling of the committee that possibly there would be opposition from the upperclass independents who should have a choice of dormitories.

Further recommendations on this issue were:

1. Upperclass women would select their own unit and floor officers as well as the freshmen women.
2. Upperclass women would have no jurisdiction over the freshmen women; this would be entirely up to the resident assistants, the sponsors, and the freshmen themselves.

Another recommendation was that more provisions be made for co-op women concerning social and intramural activities.

Counseling System

Heads of Houses stated in its letter that an adequate counseling system is needed and that counseling has been the weak spot of this year's living-in plan. They pointed out that is no assurance in the Oregon plan that the administration will give financial aid.

They suggested that the resident assistant's job and the sponsor's job should not be "played up" as an activity. They added that "It will be difficult for the sorority women to give up their 'activity women' as well as the dormitories; consequently, we feel it is very important to choose qualified persons even though they have not done activity work on campus. Such departments as the sociology and psychology departments would be able to recommend qualified persons suitable for the jobs."

In the Oregon plan, it is stated that possibly room rent may be paid to the resident assistants and the sponsors. Heads of Houses pointed out that it would cost a sorority woman more to live in a dormitory under that provision than it would to live in her house, because not only would she be paying board to the dormitory, but also she must still make certain financial obligations to her house if she is to stay active in her sorority.

Rushing and Pledging

Heads of Houses feels that if there is a strong counseling system it would be more feasible to have the freshmen women interested in rushing also make that adjustment at the beginning of fall term. They also recommended that the orientation program should be completed before rushing starts, and that rushing be completed before classes begin.

The reasons written in the letter for taking this stand on rushing

Carothers, Gould Receive Ore-Nter Orientation Jobs

The ASUO Executive Council in action Monday evening:

1. Named Jean Gould, junior in business, orientation program chairman for next fall term.
2. Selected Wayne Carothers, freshman in business, as business manager for the 1951 Ore-Nter, orientation booklet.
3. Heard an explanation of the activities of the Student Discipline Committee presented by J. M. Foskett, chairman of the committee.
4. Received recommendations of Heads of Houses in respect to changes in the Oregon Plan.
5. Listened to a report given by the Rally Board concerning their plans for next year.

The council approved the appointment of Miss Gould as orientation chairman and recommended that Fred Baltz and Betty Moshofsky, sophomores in liberal arts who also petitioned for the position, be appointed as assistant to the chairman. Nancy Allison, who was interviewed by the council last week, withdrew her petition because of the short period of time remaining to work on the orientation program and conflict with other activities.

The orientation chairman will work with the Office of Student Affairs in attempting to set up a more complete and improved freshman orientation plan for next fall.

Carothers was sole applicant for the position of Ore-Nter business manager. The job involves solicitation of donations to be used toward publication of the student edited booklet which is designed to acquaint new students with the Oregon campus.

Discipline Procedure Outlined

J. M. Foskett, chairman of the Student Discipline Committee, outlined for the council the procedure followed by the committee and the policy under which it operates.

Foskett spoke briefly of the historical background of the discipline committee, describing its growth from an all-faculty group to the present committee composed of five faculty members, two non-voting administrators, and three students nominated by the student body president and approved by the president of the University.

The committee operates under a Discipline Code, Foskett explained, which was drawn up in 1946 and approved by the University president. "The committee operates primarily as a policy forming group," Foskett said.

The discipline group delegates authority to the Office of Student Affairs, Foskett went on to explain, and that office may handle all cases, operating within the Discipline Code, with the exception of those in which possible or recommended suspension are involved. These cases must be referred to the Discipline committee he said. The Office of Student Affairs frequently confers with the committee in respect to discipline cases so as to co-ordinate policy.

"The faculty is held responsible for all student discipline," Foskett

Students, Grads Win Foreign Study Awards

Seven Oregon students and recent graduates have been tentatively granted awards under the Fulbright Act, according to J. D. Kline, foreign student adviser.

Three of these, Bonita Miller, a recent graduate, Gordon Ericksen, graduate in speech, and Elizabeth Kratt, graduate in foreign languages, are definitely winners of the grants, which pay for travel and study expenses for one year's study abroad.

Four others must receive State Department approval before their names are released, but Kline said that probably all will get that approval. This in an unusually large number for one university, Kline said.

Panian Extends Petitions Date

The deadline for Student Union committee chairmanship petitions has been extended to 5 p.m. Wednesday, according to Hank Panian, chairman of the Student Union Board.

The petitions were previously due Friday. However, due to Junior Weekend activities many people did not have the opportunity or time to petition, Panian said. Only 18 petitions were turned in for the 11 positions.

"I know that there are a number of students who are eligible for committee chairmanships—freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors, who have served as committee members," Panian said. "I hope that they, and everyone else who is interested in Student Union work, regardless of their previous service and of their class, will petition," he stated. Persons who will be sophomores next year and who have served on Student Union standing committees this year will be eligible for Student Union board membership next year," he said.

The qualifications for committee chairmen are a 2.00 GPA and interest in the Student Union. Positions are open for chairmanship of the art gallery, Browsing Room, concert, dance, house, interview and referral, movie, music, publicity, recreation, and workshop committees.

Petitions may be picked up in the office of Program Director Olga Yetvich, room 301, third floor of the SU, or in the office of the Student Union Board chairman.

An Editorial Introduction

'We Are the Great Revolutionaries'

If you care about your future... if you're really alarmed about the one-way world street down which the East and West are driving in different directions... you'll read the middle section of this morning's Emerald.

You'll read it once, twice, and maybe more. You'll pass it on to friends who need help and hope and a hand to grab.

This is the "Authentic Revolution," written by the editor of one of America's finest newspapers, The Christian Science Monitor.

And moving quietly, with the impact of a small truck, it presents a powerful philosophy for the men of the Western world. It tells what we can do. It points a way out of the maze, even if that way is nothing more than a change in attitude.

Listen to the thesis: "The struggle for the salvation of free society in our time will be lost unless we in the West—and particularly we in the United States—awaken to and project the fact that we are the great revolutionaries in world history, and that our revolution is basically a spiritual one which we have already proved in action."

Now read it, and absorb it, and read it again.
