It's Fun, But Take Heed

You new students are going to have a good time this week. The Student Union open house, the Hello Dance, and the Portland game will all be fun.

You'll have a chance for many more good times throughout the year at firesides and dances, in the Student Union, and on weekend dates. The University wants its students to enjoy themselves, so allows ample time for a student's social development.

But a new student must not become lost in this social side of college life. You must always keep foremost in your mind the realization that this is an academic institution. Its main goal is to educate young men and women along scholastic lines, to prepare them to be intelligent and useful members of society.

The fine instructors and new facilities on the University campus were procured for your benefit. They were placed here with the hope that you will take full advantage of them during your stay.

And the University expects you to make good use of its educational opportunities. If you fail, the school can—and does—remove the opportunity. Any student who falls repeatedly below a 2.00 GPA (C average) is not allowed to continue his studies here.

So keep one thought in the back of your mind while you enjoy the Freshman Week activities. Keep it in your mind throughout your entire college career. You are making an academic contract with the University of Oregon. The University expects you to keep it, and have fun too. And the responsibility is all yours.

An Admirable Position

The University of Oregon did not dismiss one single man or woman from its academic faculty this year.

The University of Washington did. Washington State did. So did the California state system colleges.

Throughout the entire country faculty men have been released due to budget cuts caused by diminishing student registrations. Enrollment in the nation's colleges and universities is estimated to drop 11 per cent this year, according to a recent bulletin from the association of land grant colleges and universities. Here at Oregon the number of new student applications last week was 17 per cent below that for the same period last fall.

True, Oregon has less faculty members this year—20 less. But these were lost through normal staff turnover. No one was told to leave.

Someone is to be commended for his excellent handling of the situation.

It is a real pleasure to extend the University's greetings and well wishes to those students new to our campus this year. It is equally a pleasure to welcome back those of you who have been with us before.

All of us are looking forward to a highly significant year, particularly since it will celebrate the 75th anniversary of the institution. Students this year will have the rare opportunity of hearing a group of outstanding men who will be visiting the campus. Among these will be Arnold Toynbee, the British historian; President James B. Conant of Harvard University; Senator Paul Douglas; President Arthur Compton of Washington University, and others.

With your registration, the rich and varied educational background of the University will be opened to you. It is our sincere hope that each of you will make the most of it.

...from Bill Carey

It is a real pleasure to welcome you, as new students, to the University of Oregon. This year the student body is dedicated to make "college life an abundant life," and you as official members of the University family will have to play an active part if we are to attain this desired goal.

A great many things have been planned to make this year—Oregon's 75th anniversary—a "big" year. The value of these things is to be realized, however, only if we as students work together. I am sure that you are going to have a lot of fun participating in our many energetic programs and activities. Just remember that the University of Oregon is now yours and you as the living representatives of this school will always have to be aware that as you honor yourself you honor her and as you disgrace yourself you disgrace her.

Strive earnestly, therefore, to be worthy of the fine University of which you are all now members.
