Allies Still Haggling With Reds Over Peace Negotiations in Korea

Compiled by Mary Ann Mowery

(From the wires of United Press)

Communist and Allied liaison officers are holding their eighth session in Korea in an effort to reach terms for resuming armistice talks. There is still no actual sign of progress toward resuming negotiations, however.

At Tuesday's meeting, some progress was reported toward an agreement on terms for reopening the talks.

But later, Allied headquarters in Tokyo accused the Reds of again being up to their old trick of delaying and harassing the progress of the talks.

And so it goes, while over here . . .

. . . The U.N. security council has adjourned until Friday morning without acting on the British-Iranian oil dispute.

Britain wants new talks on the dispute under the sponsorship of the U.N. But Iran objects to that. And the Iranian premier—Mohammed Mossadegh—personally argued before the council, saying it had no business interfering with the oil dispute because it was an internal matter.

Nope, he's a Communist front group member . . .

. . . said the house un-American activities committee of Dr. Channing Tobias, another of President Truman's nominees for delegate to the U.N. He is the second of the ten nominees to have the charge made against him.

The first was ambassador Philip Jessup who Republican senator Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin accused of having been affiliated with six Communist fronts—charges which Jessup denied.

Disapproval of another sort . . .

. . . has been displayed by the treasury department which has fired the chief of customs appraisers in Detroit, Theodor Hurwitz, on charges of misconduct.

The case has been turned over to the district attorney in Detroit for any further action.

Hurwitz's job was to evaluate imports and decide whether they could come into the United States and what the customs tax should be.

Highlights in the Korean fighting include . . .

. . . a smash of the main Chinese resistance on the western Korean front by American troops.

On the central front, the Allies are driving forward again toward the big Red base of Kumsong.

In the east, two South Korean divisions were fighting toward high ground northwest of Yanggu against opposition described as light to moderate.

Back in Washington . . .

. . . Congress will try again today to figure out a new tax-boosting bill acceptable to both houses. But a senate-house conference group got nowhere yesterday in efforts to replace the measure killed by the House.

MacArthur had the Legion behind him . . .

. . . when he let go with a rousing barrage against the Truman administration in Miami, Florida at the Legion convention.

The former U.N. commander charged the administration was leading the nation toward Socialism and blasted our foreign policy, saying you can't negotiate with Communists.

He was applauded 49 times during his 45-minute speech.

The Justice Department may be investigated . . .

. . . on charges of being lax in looking into irregularities in the Internal Revenue Bureau. Two Republican Congressmen are demanding the investigation, Kenneth Keating of New York and Patrick Hillings of California.

From the Internal Revenue Bureau . . .

. . . came word tonight that three of its employees in New York have tried to resign. The Bureau said all three are under investigation, and their resignations have not been accepted. No mention was made as to what the investigation is for.

The U.S. has appealed to Russia . . .

. . . to use her influence to bring about a Korean Armistice, the state department disclosed last night in a bulletin from the Associated Press.

"The United States has asked Russia to bring about what is called a "realistic armistice agreement."

Taft wants Truman . . .

. . . as an opponent for the Presidency in next year's election. Ohio Republican, Robert Taft says if that is the case, the issues will be clearly drawn.

Taft spoke at a National Press Club luncheon in Washington.
