Opinions Vary With Regard To Homework

By Sue Lichty

Conflicting opinions were found among students when they were asked "Do many instructors make assignments merely to give students work to do?"

Many students said that the work piled on usually has a definite purpose and does add to their knowledge of the course. Some did feel that instructors give "busy" work. They felt that more concentration on the lectures would help them to learn more.

Tom White—senior in business administration—"You always learn something when you do outside work pertinent to the course."

Janet Southern—freshman in liberal arts—"It takes all my spare time to do all of my outside reading. I learn more from lectures and can't spend enough time on them because of the extra work."

Jim Sandefer—sophomore in law—"I've never found a teacher who gave busy work. The courses of study are set up in such a way that there is a certain objective to be met without time for busy work."

Charles Simons—freshman in liberal arts—"Professors should keep work down to what the students really need. Some of the work they give is useless and does no one any good."

Delores Parish—junior in history—"No. The work has a purpose, but many teachers don't stop to realize that you are taking other courses besides theirs that take just as much time."

Dona Farrington—freshman in education—"Yes. We have too many assignments that don't do us any good. Besides that we don't have time to do them all."

Al Goldenberg—sophomore in business administration—"I don't think any instructors give an over abundance of work for no reason."

Joanne Callender—freshman in pre-nursing—"None of my teachers have given me busy work."

Exam Scheduled By Civil Service

The civil service commission announces an examination for student aid trainee positions in the fields of chemistry, physics, math, metallurgy and engineering.

The student aid trainee program offers students an opportunity to participate in special training programs of the federal agencies while they are still attending school, the commission said.

To qualify in the examination, applicants must pass a written test and must have received one-half (for jobs paying $2,650) or three-fourths (for jobs paying $2,875) of the total credits required for a bachelor's degree.

Additional information concerning these examinations may be obtained in the college placement office in Emerald hall.

Promotion Work Petitions Asked

Petitions for Homecoming promotion committee will be accepted until noon Saturday, according to Joan Walker, Homecoming promotion chairman.

Those interested may petition for promotion in general, or any one of the following sub-committees: flying speeches, signs, window displays, posters, Eugene promotion, distribution and contact.

Petitions may be turned in to Miss Walker at Kappa Alpha Theta. Special arrangements for late petitions may be made by calling her at 5-9673.

Ticket Return Asked

All men's living organizations are requested to turn in unsold Whiskerino tickets to room 311 in the Student Union between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. today, Bob Brittain, sophomore class president, announced.

Money for tickets sold should also be checked in, Brittain said.

Button Sale Chairmen Asked for Homecoming

Chairmen for Homecoming button sales were called for today by Bob Metz, Homecoming financial chairman.

Committee heads are needed to direct campus, public school, and downtown button sales, Metz said. The sales campaign in Eugene schools will be handled through school officials and high school service clubs, he said.

Petitions must be turned in to Metz in room 303 of the Student Union by Tuesday noon.
