Building Group To Sanction Plant

The new University of Oregon physical plant, which supplies all heat and power for University buildings will be officially sanctioned by the building committee of the state board of education Saturday.

Construction began one year ago last November, on a budget of 1,104,000, according to I. I. Wright, superintendent of the physical plant. The unit was "fired up" for the first time last spring, he said. Since that time it has undergone a shakedown period to correct any difficulties that arose. On June it went into full operation and has been supplying the heat and power for every office, classroom and dormitory on the campus.

A crew of 11 men is required to handle the actual operations of the plant. A system of conveyors carries the fuel, which consists of sawdust and hogged fuel, into the plant from the supply piles outside. The fuel is then automatically dropped into the furnaces to heat the boilers.

Three two-story boilers take up a considerable part of the interior of the plant. They are capable of producing 35,000 pounds of steam per hour. The steam is diverted to two steam turbine generators which produce a total of 3,000 kilowatts of electricity.

After the steam is utilized to run the generators, it is diverted into an underground piping system which distributes it to all parts of the campus. The piping system extends as far as McArthur court and the Music building and connects all major buildings.

The unit is capable of producing enough power and heat to take care of the present campus plus some anticipated additional construction, Wright said. There is room for one more boiler and turbine generator when the need arises, he stated.

AWS Furthers Auction Plans

Further plans for the Associated Women students Nov. 9 auction were made at Tuesday's meeting of the AWS congress.

Living organizations on campus are asked by the AWS to search for "white elephants" and other unused articles to help make the auction a success. The items will be collected by a member of the auction committee. Nov. 8 is the deadline for contributions.

Money gained from the auction will be used for women's scholarships. The auction will be held in the Student Union "Fishbowl".

Class Council Hears Report

Friday, Nov. 23—Bonfire, informal dance in the Student Union

Saturday, Nov. 24—Noise parade, alumni luncheon, Oregon-OSC football game individual live-OSC football game, individual live-alumni reception at the Veteran's Memorial building, Homecoming dance in the Student Union.

There will be no all-campus cleanup campaign this year in connection with Homecoming, Miss Gillmore stated.

Bob Brittain, sophomore class president, and Judy McLoughlin, sophomore class vice president, were appointed by ASUO Vice President Merv Hampton to head a group which will draw up a uniform constitution which may be used by all the classes. Purpose of the model document would be elimination of yearly revision by the various classes. Representatives of the other three classes will assist in preparing the constitution.

The council discussed class dues but reached no definite decision. Hampton said the money taken in by dues would "act as a cushion for class expenses" during the first few years of the class. At the present time the University loans each class $200 for such bumper purposes, Hampton stated. The loan is paid back at sometime during the class' four academic years, he added.

Suggested Yearly Class Dues

The group suggested that class dues be paid each year and that card-holding students be allowed reductions in ticket prices for dances and picnics as an incentive for purchase.

Freshman representatives were asked by Hampton to secure freshman opinion concerning the payment of dues.

A freshman-sophomore vaudeville show was considered by the council as an aid in creating greater class rivalry and greater unity within the classes. It was suggested that an informal dance follow the event.

No definite plans for the vaudeville will be made until regular freshman officers have been installed following freshman elections winter term, it was decided. Freshman representatives were asked to sound out freshman opinion on the subject.

Formulation of an information chart for use by organizations planning campus dances, was announced by Les Anderson, class advisor. The chart, prepared by Virginia Wright, assistant program director for the Student Union, presents a detailed listing of steps to be taken in putting on a dance. The chart will be available to all interested groups, Anderson said, and will act as a guide.

Says Loose-leaf Notebooks Ordered

Anderson also told the council that loose-leaf notebooks have been ordered for all classes for the keeping of class records. The records will be transferred each year to the notebook assigned to that specific class, he said. Freshman records will be placed in the sophomore class book when the class members become sophomores.

Upon graduation of the class, the records will be placed in a permanent file for reference. The notebooks will contain the class constitution, duties of the officers, minutes of meetings, financial reports and activity records, Anderson explained.

The next class council meeting will be held at 7 p.m., Nov. 20. Anderson requested that all council members bring an idea concerning new activities which could be sponsored by students.

that all men of military age, with no exemptions for college students and other groups then deferred, be called into service. His proposals, later known as the Conant Plan, were largely followed in the January, 1951, proposals of Secretary of Defense George Marshall. Later Conant revised his earlier "no exceptions" plan to urge that students now in college be deferred until they had completed their studies.

He is the author of several books. Since becoming president of Harvard, Conant has received honorary degrees from some thirty colleges and universities, including Oxford and Cambridge in England. He has been a member of the board of scientific directors of the Rockefeller Institute since 1930, and he served as a member of the Educational Policies Commission from 1941 to 1946.

Vacated Offices In Red Cross Open for Petitions

New officers for the campus Red Cross organization will be selected next week in order to replace former officers who have resigned or left school, according to Treasurer Gerry Pearson.

Any University student may petition for any of the offices, which include those of president, vice-president, treasurer, assistant treasurer, promotions chairman, blood drive chairman and the various special events chairmen.

Petitions are due at 9:30 p.m. Sunday and may be turned in to Miss Pearson at the Kappa Alpha Theta house.

The special events will include first-aid classes for skiers and also water safety programs.

Houses to Make Signs For Saturday's Game

According to Rally Board Chairman Ron Symons, each campus living organization is requested to construct a rough sign of a "beat Idaho" nature and to place the sign in front of its own house.

The motto for the State of Oregon is "The Union".
