in a University." Orlando J. Hollis, dean of the law school, will preside as master of ceremonies, representing the alumni of the University.

Chancellor Charles D. Byrne of the Oregon State System of Higher Education will speak briefly, as will President Newburn. A chamber music group will play dinner music and Morris Beachy, graduate student in the music school, will sing two baritone solos.

Delegates will be guests of university departments at a luncheon at noon today in the Student Union building.

Heating Plant Open to Public
The new University heating and generating plant will be open for public inspection Friday and Saturday mornings. A special display of early University of Oregon documents may be viewed during the weekend in the library.

Portraits of University of Oregon presidents are now on display at the Student Union, as are greetings and congratulatory messages the university has received from universities and professional leaders in America and Europe.

The Student Union hospitality committee will conduct guided tours of the building over the weekend for University guests.

Civil service workers and faculty members may be excused from their duties to attend the convocation this afternoon, L. M. Nelson, director of public services, has announced.

The addresses by President Conant and President MacKenzie are open to the public at no charge.
