Russians Ridicule U.S. Suggestion For World Munitions Census

Compiled by Tom Jaques

(From the Wires of Associated Press and United Press)

The United States has presented its proposal for a world census of arms to the U.N. general assembly in Paris, only to meet ridicule by Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky. Secretary of State Dean Acheson presented the plan for disarming and an accounting of atomic and other weapons.

Vishinsky immediately described the idea as ridiculous and countered by calling for a world conference by next June to consider the whole disarmament question. The Russian proposals got an equally cool reception in western circles.

Both plans call for disarmament. The United States, Britain and France, want a strict limit on armed strength—both manpower and equipment. And they propose inspections to see that military restrictions are obeyed.

Both plans mention the desirability of an armistice in Korea. But the Russians demand in addition the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea within three months. The Russians also want Allied troops to withdraw to the 38th parallel—a condition which a French spokesman says Russia could not hope to impose.

Still hopeful but far from optimistic . . .

. . . are the armistice prospects from Panmunjom. Negotiators are still in disagreement on the issue of a cease-fire line.

Allied officers have flatly rejected a Communist proposal for a buffer zone on the grounds it would relieve the Red from any pressure to reach an agreement on other truce terms. The spokesman for the U.N. negotiators, Brig. Gen. William Nuckols, said that "the proposal is no longer under study for hidden meanings or gimmicks. We have an understanding on what it means and we reject it."

Red troops have staged attacks . . .

. . . on the western and central fronts. All were thrown back. An Allied officer reported an increase in Red tank and infantry movements in the west.

A hill north of Yonchon in the west changed hands for the eighth time in two weeks. Allied troops trapped a Red battalion there and then withdrew from the hill in the early hours of the morning. The Reds occupied the crest and then Allied guns opened up on it. Several hours later, the Allies reoccupied the hill without opposition.

There were three air fights between Migs and Sabre jets and the air force claimed one Red Mig was shot down and two damaged.

There's optimism in the state department . . .

. . . over chances of getting Iran to settle her oil dispute with Britain—but British embassy officials are not as hopeful.

Iranian Premier Mossadegh has been conferring with American officials for two weeks, and word has it that the Iranians are willing to sell 70 per cent of its nationalized oil production to the West—at a discount.

The Iranian premier is still determined to oust the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co., however.

Production restrictions over autos . . .

. . . and household items will go into effect on Feb. 1 in order to reserve machine tools for military and defense-supporting production, the government announced Thursday.

The order means there will be no major changes in new cars, refrigerators and washing machines after February. However, 1952 car models will not be affected.

The president is at the winter White House . . .

. . . at Key West, Fla. and he plans to stay there for the next four or five weeks.

It will be a "working vacation" for the president. He will spend much of his time working on three messages he will send Congress in January—the budget, economic and "state of the union" messages.
