Armistice Supervision Issue Now That Cease-fire Line Settled

Compiled by Mary Ann Mowery

(From the Wires of Associated Press and United Press)

Armistice supervision is the major issue now that a cease-fire line has been agreed upon by the U.N. and the Red peace negotiators.

The Reds were expected to give their answer to the U.N. Tuesday night.

There's a chance the Reds may reject two major issues in the Allied plan. They are a proposal for joint truce-inspection teams and a ban on military build-ups.

Yugoslav premier Marshal Tito indicated . . .

Tuesday that Archbishop Stepinac might be released from prison within one month.

Tito did not specifically say the Roman Catholic archbishop would be set free. Instead, the Yugoslav leader said the question of releasing Stepinac would be solved within a month.

The 53-year-old prelate was put in prison nearly five years ago. He was convicted on charges of wartime collaboration with the Axis. When offered his freedom several months ago, he refused because it meant he would have to leave his country.

Czech vice-premier Rudolf Slansky . . .

has been fired and arrested on grounds of activities against the state. Observers in western nations are wondering what caused his downfall. Three reasons have been suggested:

- 1. Personal rivalry between Slansky and Czech President, Klement Gottwald.
2. Moscow may be taking a firmer hold on Czech affairs.
3. Gottwald may be getting too independent for Moscow.

Robert Vogeler says U.S. fumbled . . .

in the job of getting him released from a prison in Communist Hungary.

The American businessman said in the "Saturday Evening Post" he's afraid the same thing will happen in the case of American newsman William Oatis unless the United States adopts what Vogeler called "new and courageous tactics" in dealing with Russia and her satellites.

The wage talks in Pittsburgh . . .

which opened Tuesday may have far-reaching effects on the nation's economy.

This time, the CIO steelworkers are bucking both the steel industry and federal wage controls. Union leader Philip Murray has indicated the steelworkers won't be satisfied with a raise of only four or five cents an hour.

Railroad labor troubles became worse . . .

Tuesday when representatives of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Fireman and Engineers walked out of a hearing on its two-year-old dispute with the railroads. They have denounced president Truman's appointment of an emergency board as a "mockery."

sees no chance of stepping up production of many consumer items, especially those requiring strategic metals. He believes, though, that military production goals can be met without any more than minor changes in the present level of civilian production.

He stated rearmament is progressing at the pace of World War II, but a series of strikes in the last four months were no help. However, Wilson said the production record is better than when the no-strike pledge was in effect during the war.

It is the intention of the joint committee to discover whether the defense program would benefit by any new legislation.

Six newsmen and three magazines . . .

have been accused of biased, prejudiced and inaccurate news coverage of the Korean war. The charge was made by retired Maj.-Gen. Charles Willoughby, former chief of intelligence for Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

All six newsmen promptly denied the accusations. Associated Press newsmen, Hal Boyle says that American intelligence in Korea, for which Willoughby was responsible, was very bad and probably was responsible for any mistakes made.

Two plane crashes took place Tuesday . . .

One involved a Navy seaplane, carrying 11 persons which crashed at sea off San Diego, Calif. today. There were no survivors.

Pacific Fleet Airforce headquarters says the flying boat which was on a routine training flight, broke in two when it struck the water.

The other crash involved a B-29 bomber which went down near March Air Base in California. However, its crew of 13 men parachuted to safety.

Students Shun Entrance Policy At OSC Game

By Sue Lichty

"Do you think that the policy of requiring registration cards at the Oregon-Oregon State game for admission was justifiable?" was the question asked students Tuesday.

Most felt that it was not. The students said that this policy accomplished little and they believed that all activity cards should be used regardless of who used them.

The few who believed it justifiable said that it is a sure way of getting back stolen and borrowed athletic cards. The athletic cards were collected from those without registration cards at the game, to be paged up later when they showed up with registration cards.

Rosemary Hampton—freshman in liberal arts—"No! As many people should use the cards as possible. They shouldn't go to waste."

Bob Shryock—5th year architecture student—"Certainly not. It shows a lack of faith by the university officials in the students. Also it shows a lack of intelligent adult management."

Ann Price—freshman in liberal arts—"It is a good idea. Then if the athletic cards are stolen, you get them back. It was for our own protection."

Joel Gray—freshman in liberal arts—"There was no point in it. Those people who loaned their cards can get them back, anyway."

Clarice Duling—sophomore in journalism—"No, they shouldn't have done that. It should have been publicized so that those who have student body cards could have taken them to the game."

Jim Ramsey—sophomore in liberal arts—"The purpose was defeated when some kids got in anyway, whether they had their student body cards or not."

Lila Saling—freshman in liberal arts—"Yes, I lent mine out and that makes sure I get it back."

Nancy Pollard—senior in architecture—"I'd like to know what was accomplished by doing it."

Landscaping Begun On University Street

Bulldozers have finished preliminary work for landscaping the area now occupied by University st. north of 13th ave.

The east wing of Friendly hall, which was previously occupied by the alumni offices, was razed last week, and plans call for landscaping the whole north University st. area.

A walk will be constructed from 13th ave. to the school of architecture and allied arts, according to I. I. Wright, superintendent of the physical plant. Plans also call for a system of sidewalks to be constructed to the science building from 13th ave.

A curved driveway will be built from 13th ave. to the Friendly hall parking lot. A small driveway will also be constructed to the entrance of the science building.

At least a temporary walk will be built to the Emerald shack, Wright said. The Emerald offices will be moved to the planned new journalism school building, when that structure is completed, and the shack will then be torn down.

IRC to Discuss Kashmir Crisis

The Kashmir question will be discussed at a meeting of the International Relations club at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the men's lounge of Gerlinger hall.

Students from India and Pakistan will participate in the discussion of the kingdom, located in Asia's Himalaya Mountains, which has caused controversy between the two nations. The place of Kashmir in the division of India into Pakistan and India following British departure has been a sore spot, assuming international significance.

Foreign students, IRC members, and their guests are invited by the club to attend the meeting.
