Storm Damages UO, Eugene Area

home fell across the street there. In Junction City, 14 miles north of Eugene, a tornado plucked a machine shed 300 feet into the air over a farm Thursday, while hailstones three quarter of an inch in diameter fell.

Power lines were down in two places on campus, necessitating safety measures by the city fire department. Because of the excessive number of power lines blown down and flue fires, the off-duty shift was called in.

Present cold weather set in after the storm subsided, providing new dangers. State police Sunday reported packed snows in the Siskiyou mountains, with chains needed. The police could not predict what road conditions would be when final examination and next week. Weather conditions at that time cannot be forecast now, the weather bureau said.
