'Less Reason to Think Reds Want Stable Armistice,' Says Joy

Compiled by Tom Jaques

(From the wires of the United Press and Associated Press)

Vice Admiral C. Turner Joy, the chief Allied truce negotiator, said Monday in a formal statement that "there is less and less reason to think the Communists really want a stable armistice."

Joy issued the statement shortly after flying to Tokyo to confer with Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, presumably in connection with the deadlocked negotiations at Panmunjom.

"Certainly," Joy said, "no one can accuse them of being in a hurry to demonstrate good faith."

Joy arrived in Tokyo as the Panmunjom subcommittee discussing supervision of a Korean armistice abruptly ended Monday's meeting on a Communist charge the Allies were no longer interested in the subject.

The negotiators agreed to meet again today although the latest session was marked by Communist snickering and giggling and an apparent lack of interest by the Red negotiator and his assistant.

There was only one hotspot on the battlefield . . .

. . . Monday, and the 145-mile zone was comparatively quiet.

The one flareup came in the west, where U.N. troops are battling fiercely for the 11th day to get back a key advance position taken by the Reds Dec. 28.

Allied infantry were moving slowly toward their objective. They turned back two Red attacks and then launched a strong assault of their own.

The battle is raging about four miles west of Korangpo, which is only six miles northeast of the truce location at Panmunjom.

France faces another government crisis . . .

. . . and this one comes at a crucial time in France's international relations.

Right now, France once again has no real cabinet. Premier Rene Pleven's middle-of-the-road cabinet is out, defeated on a vote of confidence in the national assembly. The cabinet members resigned after the assembly defeated them 341 votes to 243 on the first of eight scheduled confidence votes on economy measures for the 1952 budget.

The first vote was on government proposals to cut the huge deficit in the state-owned national railways.

The Pleven cabinet will continue to operate as a sort of caretaker government until a new cabinet is formed.

President Truman and Churchill went to work . . .

. . . Monday, on a project to streamline the cumbersome North Atlantic treaty organization to make it more effective.

The first formal conference between Mr. Truman and the British prime minister at the White House covered a wide range of problems. Included were discussions of the economic problems involved in the western defense effort, and simplification of the North Atlantic treaty pact.

Another meeting scheduled for Monday night was to include discussion of the atomic bomb.

It's slow going for the Flying Enterprise . . .

. . . and the most is hoped for is that the hurricane-battered ship and her skipper will reach Falmouth, England, on Wednesday.

Capt. Kurt Carlsen's vessel is reported riding easily in tow. A message from the U.S. destroyer Willard Keith is that the ship does not seem to be listing as badly as before.

Seamen say the battered Enterprise is now in its greatest danger, heading into increasing winds and swells that might capsize it.

The Israeli parliament was disrupted Monday . . .

. . . during an anti-German riot which resulted in injuries to 125 persons.

The rioters, estimated at several thousand, smashed through police barricades and hurled tear gas into the parliament building.

The demonstrators were protesting a decision to negotiate directly with West Germany in connection with Jewish claims for reparations. They made their attack shortly after Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion issued a statement justifying such claims.

The 82nd Congress begins its session today . . .

. . . amid lots of free advice from many quarters, but most of it is certain to go unheeded.

Defense mobilizer Charles E. Wilson recommended tighter price controls, and the CIO demanded closing of tax loopholes.

The returning legislators were far more interested in the forthcoming political campaigns and in the various investigations of government waste and corruption than they were in trying to write a great many new laws.

First on the agenda of the new session will be the election of a new floor leader to succeed the late Kenneth S. Wheery of Nebraska.

Russian churches were crowded Monday . . .

. . . as worshippers celebrated Christmas 13 days after the western observance of the holiday.

The Russian orthodox church still uses the old Julian calendar, though the Soviet government has adopted the Gregorian calendar of the west.

There are still thousands of churches in the Soviet Union, even though many have been closed since the Bolshevik revolution.

A British patrol clashed with Egyptian guerillas . . .

. . . Sunday night on the Ismailia-Abu Suweir road, a British military spokesman said Monday.

The spokesman said there were no British casualties and it was not known what losses were suffered by the guerillas.

Students Approve Ike's Candidacy For Presidency

By Jean Lewis

"What do you think of Senator Lodge's statement that he will put Eisenhower's name on the New Hampshire Republican primary ticket?"

Most of the students interviewed with this question thought that Eisenhower should run for president because he would make a good president or because there is no other person as capable of the job at this time. One student thought that "Ike" should not run as he is needed more where he is.

Most interviewed thought that Eisenhower would run for president if he were supported by the people and one person thought he should declare himself if he is going to run.

The question was asked before "Ike's" decision was announced.

Barbara Cook—freshman in liberal arts—"It's hard to say whether he'll run or not but if people get behind him there's a possibility."

Cal Hovland—senior in geography—"If he does run he would probably be elected but he would do more good for the country where he is."

Dick Courtwright—graduate student in education—"Under the circumstances Eisenhower would probably be the only one the Republicans would have a chance with unless they can find another Abe Lincoln, which is rather unlikely in this day and age."

Edna Tinker—sophomore in business—"I think Eisenhower should declare himself."

Bernice Queen—junior in business—"I don't know whether it would be a good idea to have a military man for president, but if we are going to be eternally at war, maybe Eisenhower would make a good president, but how do we know unless we try it, and if it doesn't work out we can always oust him in four years."

Len Calvert—freshman in journalism—"I think Eisenhower might make a good president but it's too early for an opinion until I find out who else is going to run."

Bill Owen—junior in architecture—"I think it's a good plan. Every state should do the same."

Susan Berg—freshman in education—"I think he would make a good president and I hope he runs. They should put him on the Republican ticket in New Hampshire."

Valerie Holden—freshman in liberal arts—"With the world situation like it is now he should be president."

Calligraphy Samples On View at Library

Handwriting samples of historically prominent nobility and architectural models are currently being displayed in the University library.

William III, Oliver Cromwell, Queen Elizabeth, Sir Walter Raleigh, Mary, Queen of Scots, and Queen Katherine of Aragon have their handwriting featured in the display.

The models, including a home, civic center and examples of basic design and construction were done by students of the architecture school.

A collection of sea shells is also being shown.

Demonstrations, Lectures by Add Machine Co. Set

Five representatives of the Burroughs Adding Machine company presented the latest accounting techniques during a series of lectures and demonstrations of business machines and equipment beginning Jan. 3, and will continue the program until Jan. 12 in room 206, Commerce.

The program is designed to introduce the junior and senior business administration students to the latest methods and systems being used by business in performing the accounting tasks students have learned in the classroom.

The series of instructional periods include lectures and practical illustrations in such fields as billing, accounts receivable, accounts payable, payroll, general accounting, cost accounting, budgetary accounting, bank accounting, microfilming and statistics.

Twenty-six of the latest model adding, bookkeeping, accounting and microfilming machines will be used in the course. Not only business administration students are welcome to the exhibit, but also anyone who is interested, the business school said. As announced by Stillman, "The series is part of the University of Oregon's program to equip students with practical knowledge of business methods."
