Floods in Eastern States Kill Nine, 7000 Persons Forced from Homes

(From the wires of the United Press and Associated Press)
Compiled by Kitty Fraser

Floods in three eastern states have taken nine lives and forced 7000 persons from their homes.

The flooded Ohio river, over its banks in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, pushed its crest through Wheeling, West Virginia, Monday and headed down stream for Marietta, Ohio. Flood stage at Marietta is 35 feet and Army engineers estimate the river will crest at 47 feet this afternoon. The crest is not expected to reach Cincinnati until Thursday.

Towns where the crest has passed are not out of danger. Heavy rain in Central Ohio is expected to dump more flood waters into the Ohio through its tributaries. State officials report at least 100 Ohio highways cut by high water, with river bank industries flooded and schools closed in many cities and towns.

In Pennsylvania, officials said more rain had fallen over the past weekend than the heavy rain that brought a disastrous flood in 1936. No casualties have been reported in Pennsylvania, a network of flood control dams is credited with saving the western part of the state from serious damage.

Anti-British rioting . . .

. . . has died down in Cairo, the capital of Egypt, since King Farouk Sunday threw out the cabinet and set up a new one. The country remains under martial law and the new premier Aly Maher Pasha, says it will stay that way unless conditions change.

The new independent premier has been promised conditional support from the powerful Wafdist party, the group which was ousted when he was named premier. The condition is that the new premier follow the policy of ousting the British from the Suez Canal area and the Sudan.

The United States has . . .

. . . granted 300 million dollars to bolster Britain's defense production. It's about half what Britain said it would need. In announcing the grant, Mutual Security Director W. Averell Harriman noted that Britain is currently producing more military equipment than all other European allies combined.

The money will come out of the seven billions appropriated by Congress under the Mutual Security Act. Harriman said the grant will be used almost entirely for raw material and other items purchased up to next July.

Harriman justified the grant with the explanation that without the 300 million, Britain would be forced to reduce its defense program more than twice as much. And he said it's vital that no such reduction should be made.

In Manila, reparations . . .

. . . talks between the Philippines and Japan have opened on a friendly note. However, the meeting was quickly recessed after the Philippines handed the Japanese World War two damage claims of more than eight million dollars.

Morris Returns From Meeting

Victor P. Morris, dean of the business administration school, returned from the East last week where he attended a meeting of the executive committee of the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business.

Morris is a member of the executive committee. The University of Oregon is a member of the association. The University entered the association in 1914, very soon after its organization.

The executive committee is considering the application for admission of several schools in different parts of the country. These applications, however, will be held up for a few months pending a nation wide study of the standards of the schools which are already members.

The study, being made by Dean Richard L. Kozelka of the School of Business Administration at the University of Minnesota, is covering some 25 schools of business.

The executive committee also completed plans for the annual meeting of the association which will be held this year at the University of Denver, late in April.

While in the East, Morris interviewed a number of men who are being considered for appointments on the Oregon staff.

Among the campuses visited by Morris were Columbia, New York University, Michigan, Wayne, Chicago and Washington university at St. Louis, Mo. Morris said he found that upon these campuses, veteran conditions, shrinking enrollments and staff vacancies are about the same as they are in the West.

A Modern Dress Role At Last for Jo Delap

By Gail Savage

"This is the first modern dress show I've ever played in," Jo DeLap stated in reference to her role in "All the King's Men." "It is also the first time I've worn heels on stage," she continued.

Miss DeLap plays Sadie Burke, Willie Stark's little helper. Sadie is a hard bitten, cynical woman, "from the wrong side of the tracks." Though not pretty (her face was scarred, a dynamic and domineering person who has control over all the men in the play with the exception of Stark, whom she loves sincerely.

Sadie Meets Stark

Sadie meets Stark when she is sent along to keep an eye on him for the political bosses, who have persuaded him to run for governor. They want Stark to run as a "dummy" candidate to split the votes against the opposition. Sadie travels with him during the campaigning and later becomes his mistress.

"Though the role of Sadie is a comparatively short part, her mood varies from deep gloom to hysteria and sunning," Miss DeLap said.

Mercedes McCambridge won the Academy award as the best supporting actress as Sadie in the film production of "All the King's men."

21st Play

Miss DeLap's stage work "comes of rage" with this production. "All theater. At present Miss DeLap holds the title of wardrobe mistress for the theater.

Another of her jobs was stage manager of "Martha," one of the largest productions ever put on by the University.

Among the plays Miss DeLap has appeared in are "Anne of the Thousand Days," "Warrior's Husband," "Mary of Scotland" and "Modwoman of Chailott."
