Mortar Board Presents Awards

Three sophomore women were named winners of the Mortar Board plaque at that organization's annual Smarty Party Wednesday night.

The three are Shirley Shupe, Martha LaVaun Krueger and Mary Ellin Moore, who earned the highest grades among freshman women last year. The award is based on both grades and hours.

Fifty-six freshman women were honored at the party, given each year for those freshman earning above a 3.00 GPA fall term.

Entertainment was furnished by Anita McGregor, singing "When You're Away" and "Love Is Where You Find it," accompanied by Donna Mast; and by a group of students from the Hawaii Islands including Margaret Ednie, Betty Towata, Marcus Schutte and Val Cavaco who danced and played the ukulele.

Mrs. Golda P. Wickham, director of women's affairs, gave a short talk for the freshmen. Marilyn Thompson, Mortar Board president, was mistress of ceremonies and members of Kwama, sophomore women's service honorary, assisted in serving.

Basketball Games Have Preference Over Concerts

By Jean Lewis

"Do you attend more basketball games than concerts and speeches?"

Seven of the 12 students questioned preferred basketball games, while 5 went to more concerts and speeches.

Lack of time and interest and lack of publicity of the events were three reasons given for not attending more concerts and speeches. One student said he would go to more concerts if they were popular music.

Students went to basketball games because they were more relaxing and it was important to support the team.

Carol Cross—freshman in business—"More basketball games because they are more relaxing and I enjoy them more."

Janet Blum—freshman in liberal arts—"Concerts. I'm more interested in music than men."

Dick Hamilton—freshman in history—"I go to more games; speeches are usually close to meal time and I work."

Jim Courtright—senior in political science—"I like basketball games best. If they were popular music, I'd go to the concerts."

Emil Smith—freshman in liberal arts—"I don't go to more basketball games because of lack of time. I think the concerts are good."

Carol Thompson—senior in psychology—"No; the concerts are more interesting and I get more out of them. I'm a married student—that makes a difference what we go to."

Robert Paul—sophomore in English—"I try to attend each University-sponsored concert. I attend most of the basketball games."

Mary Lou Hansen—junior in business administration—"More basketball games; I enjoy school sports more. I think we should support the University teams."

Harold Watts—sophomore in business administration—"No. I feel concerts and speeches are more important; they don't come here as often."

Ann Ostenson—senior in education—"I attend more basketball games; there is more publicity on them and more at stake. I attend some of the lectures."
