

World News Capsules Truman Will Enter Democratic Party New Hampshire Primary

Compiled by Mary Ann Mowery

(From the wires of the United Press and Associated Press)

President Truman has changed his mind about not entering the New Hampshire Democratic presidential preference primary.

The president has agreed to a popularity test against Sen. Estes Kefauver, the only announced candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. However, this does not mean Truman has decided to run for re-election. Democratic National Chairman Frank McKinney says he urged the president to run for organizational reasons. If Truman withdrew his name, a slate of New Hampshire Democrats pledged to support him would be disqualified from taking part in the party's national convention in July.

Truman Tuesday left the door open for him to step aside later by noting that the New Hampshire primary is "purely advisory" and does not bind delegates to cast their votes for any particular candidate at the national convention.

Senator Taft's bid . . .

. . . for the Republican presidential nomination has been carried into Virginia. Speaking at Harrisonburg, Taft backed up Gen. MacArthur's Far East youicy. The Ohio lawmaker said, "I believe that by the methods suggested by General MacArthur, we might have achieved the United Nations objective of setting up a united and free Korea."

John Davis Lodge . . .

. . . governor of Connecticut, has announced he will give his personal enthusiastic support to Gen. Eisenhower for the Republican presidential nomination.

Governor Lodge is expected to head his state's 22 delegates to the Republican national convention.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower . . .

. . . apparently will be a candidate for both the Republican and Democratic nominations for president in the Oregon primary election in May.

Attorney General George Neuner said Tuesday there is no way Secretary of State Earl T. Newby can bar Eisenhower's name from the Democratic ballot, even though the general has declared himself a Republican, except by court order.

Both parties presumably will claim "General Ike" for their own. The Democratic petition already filed was signed by more than the needed 1,000 described as "his supporters who are registered voters in the state of Oregon of the political party to which said candidate belongs." All the signers of that petition to put Eisenhower's name on the Democratic ballot are Democrats.

The 36th plenary session at Munsan, Korea . . .

. . . of the full Korean armistice delegation has convened. The meeting presumably has begun discussions on the final agenda item—recommendations to the belligerent governments.

The session opened at 10 a.m. Wednesday, which was 8 p.m. E.S.T., Tuesday only to recess 20 minutes later. The meeting site was a tent at Panmunjom.

At the meeting, the Communists were expected to disclose their plans for Korea. The North Korean delegate, Gen. Nam Il, had announced he would present a draft of Communist recommendations to the governments concerned for a Korean settlement.

Regular meetings of staff officers drafting truce supervision agreements and the subcommittee on prisoner exchange were scheduled to begin when the plenary session ends.

Korean war action . . .

. . . is highlighted by stepped-up Allied air action. U.N. planes have destroyed four Red ammunition and supply bases in heavy attacks.

On the ground, there was nothing but small patrol actions except in the west where U.N. ground troops took back a hill without a fight.

On the sea Marine-piloted fighter-bombers from a light carrier smashed enemy installations near the west coast port of Chinnampo, destroying or damaging more than 30 buildings.

An air force B-29 . . .

. . . with 11 crewmen aboard crashed and exploded a few miles from a big California air base today, the air base information officer reported.

An information office spokesman said the death toll "may be 5 or 6, but that's unconfirmed."

The Riverside county sheriff's office reported at first that the B-29 crashed into a private residence "with at least five killed." However, that report was contradicted by the state division of forestry, whose units were called out to fight the fire that enveloped the wreckage.

"It did not hit the house, but the road in front . . . the house is not on fire," forestry spokesman said.

The senate foreign relations committee . . .

. . . today unanimously approved the Japanese peace treaty and three Pacific mutual security pacts.

The committee's resolution approving the peace treaty specified that the action does not mean approval of Russia's claims to former Japanese territory or of any concessions obtained by Russia in the 1945 Yalta agreement.

The committee also approved U.S. mutual security agreements with Japan, the Philippines, Australia and New Zealand.

The State department . . .

. . . will move soon for retrial of Judith Coplon of espionage charges. Two federal court juries in Washington and in New York have convicted the 30-year-old former Justice department employee of spying for Russia but a series of higher court rulings has kept her in prison.

The new trial would be held in Washington.

Webfoot Precedes Oregana First Published 50 Years Ago

By Irene Bullard

When the 1952 edition of the "Oregana," University student yearbook, is published, there may be a few professors who remember Oregon's first yearbook, "The Webfoot," which was published in 1902.

"The Webfoot," a little 7½ by 9½-inch book, was largely an informal production. After the opening pages, which included a history of Deady hall and some other literary efforts, the bulk of the book consisted of pages of original poetry and numerous "Out of the Classroom" photos of coeds in straw hats and shirtwaists, reclining coyly with parasols akimbo.

The editorial staff rated a full-page picture, showing them posed against a fence in voluminous rain togs and umbrellas. No colored pictures were included.

The book had an imitation leather cover, and this became a tradition which remained unbroken until 1934, when Editor Madeleine Gilbert covered the yearbook with a rich tan cloth of heavy weave.

The yearbook became the "Oregana" in 1910.

The first photographic cover, produced in 1936, was the first on any college yearbook. The first natural color pictures appeared in the "Oregana" in 1938.

YWCA, YMCA Sponsor Festival

Foreign students from all over Oregon have been invited to the International Festival to be held on campus Saturday, Feb. 16. The festival is sponsored by the YMCA and YWCA.

Warren Tomlinson, professor of political science at the College of Puget Sound, will be guest speaker at a dinner that evening.

Invitations have been sent to interested townspeople and foreign students throughout Oregon, Marion Briner, chairman of the YWCA international affairs committee, has announced.

Students at OSC, Lewis and Clark, Willamette, Linfield, Reed, Pacific, the three Oregon colleges of education, University of Portland and Clark junior college, Vancouver, Wash.

Miss Briner said any University of Oregon students may attend. Reservations for the dinner may be made by calling the YWCA.

Registration of delegates will take place from 2 to 3 p.m. Saturday, followed by a coffee hour and talent show in the Alumni hall in Gerlinger. A dance will be held in Gerlinger annex following the dinner that evening.

Bowling Lessons May Be Dropped

Bowling lessons for men and women, sponsored by the Student Union recreation committee, will be given this afternoon at 3:30 p.m. in the SU alleys.

Instructors for the lessons are Louis Bellissimo, SU recreation manager, and Major I. L. Ungerleider, assistant professor of air science, both outstanding men in the field. Charge for lessons is 50 cents an hour which includes shoe rental, instructions, and one hour of bowling.

At a recent recreation committee meeting, John McAloon, committee chairman, reported that unless more interest is shown in the Wednesday bowling program, it will be dropped.

Ping-Pong Tournament

An inter-collegiate ping-pong tournament, sponsored by the Student Union recreation committee, will be held Feb. 12 and 13. The tournament is open to all university students. Those interested may sign up now at the SU recreation desk.

A trophy will be awarded the winner.
