Keglers Suspect

LINCOLN, Neb. (U.P.) — At least one Nebraskan was not satisfied with the state's crackdown on gambling. Attorney General C. S. Beck reported he received an anonymous letter from a resident warning him that there was a bowling alley "going full blast on the edge of town."

Final Three Have Hopes for Crown On Friday Night

By Donna Hart

Three more eligible young men competing for the crown of King of Hearts are Bob Chambers, Paul Lasker and Arne Borgnes.

The other three finalists—Bob Brittain, Hal Dunham and Jim Harding—were interviewed in Wednesday's Emerald.

Bob Chambers, 5 feet 7 inches "with platform shoes on," is the candidate of Delta Gamma. The 21-year-old from Portland is a senior-majoring in radio.

"Lives" in Speech Department
Most of Bob's time is spent in the speech department where he says he "practically lives." He is primarily interested in anything having to do with radio, and hopes someday to go into show business or "anything with a kick to it."

Activities which he has engaged in have been limited primarily to the speech school and he serves as a member of the executive board of the University theater.

Bob said that one of his chief activities is giving blood, and he has now given three times. He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega.

Lasker Yell King
Paul Lasker, well known as Oregon's yell king, is one of the "old men" of the contest—he is 23.

Though now living in Portland, Paul was originally a graduate of Lewiston high school in Lewiston, Idaho. He brought himself and his red hair to Oregon in 1950, and is now a sophomore majoring in education.

The Alpha Tau Omega candidate has served as a member of the Red

Cross board, of which he is disaster chairman, and as chairman of the Student Union house rules committee. Though interested in athletics, Nothing can surpass Paul's favorite pastime of "simply enjoying life."

Borgnes from Norway
Last, but not least, of the six finalists is Arne Borgnes, a Norwegian exchange student. Arne came to Oregon from his hometown of Jar, a few miles outside of the Norwegian capitol of Oslo, in the fall of 1950 as a special student. The 23-year-old Phi Delta Theta is majoring in foreign trade. When he goes back to Norway next summer he would like to get a job in the foreign trade service for the government.

When asked what year he was in school, Arne replied, "I really don't know."

Some Kind of Confusion
Due to some confusion in the transfer of credits from a business school which he attended in Norway, he is still in the special student status.

However he hopes to get his bachelor of arts degree by next summer. One of his main interests is skiing. He is on the University ski team. Asked what he thought of Oregon, he said "I like it very well." He is the candidate of Phi Delta Theta and Kappa Kappa Gamma.

Married Students Form Organization

An organization of married students was formed on the campus Tuesday night because of the conviction, declared by the group's executive committee, that "such students in the past have been grossly underrepresented or unrepresented in campus politics and before the administration."

Married students are vitally concerned with and interested in campus policies, the committee said, and should have an organization to represent their interests.

The group will hold an organizational meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union and all married students have been invited by the committee to attend.

At Wednesday's meeting a permanent executive body will be elected. It is planned to have representatives from all housing areas set aside for married students.

Charles Carter, graduate assistant in education; Frank Neuber, teaching fellow in political science; and James Tallman, graduate in education, will prepare Wednesday's agenda.

The married student's organization will share quarters with the YMCA in the Student Union.

George VI's Death

English-speaking countries feels a deep and sincere grief, I am sure." "It's hard for us here to understand the place of royalty in England. The King is a symbol of solidarity and unity to people of the commonwealth. He never comes under political criticism, and is above the political workings of the government," said Moll.

"The emotions one feels toward the King are pure and sincere," he said.

Princess Elizabeth has been trained since childhood for this event and is already well-accepted by the people, said Moll. She will do a fine job, he declared.

Fred Turner, junior in liberal arts from Kelowna, British Columbia, first learned of the King's death when asked how Canadians feel about this.

"The King is dead?" Turned exclaimed.

Only a Figurehead
"The King is only a figurehead in England, and less in Canada. There'll probably be a day of mourning for him, though," said Turner.

Kenneth Hayes, graduate student in chemistry, who came here from England two years ago, said "95 per cent of the British people will go into mourning for the King."

"Feelings for the King are a personal thing and his death comes as a great shock," Hayes said. "He was the fourth British ruler I'd seen and events of the royalty are always of great interest," the Britisher said.

Sees Crowds
Hayes said he could visualize crowds of people around the palace and in the air hushed words; "The King is dead,—long live the Queen."

Bill Hunter, sophomore in business administration from Olds, Alberta, said "it's quite a shock, especially after the King recently survived an operation and seemed to be getting better."

"In the areas in Canada where there are mostly English people, I imagine they're taking it pretty hard," he remarked.

Isaac Battel, junior in liberal arts from Bruno, Saskatchewan, said "in past years, we've had little contact with the royalty, except for the recent visit of the Princess and the Duke of Edinburgh."

"The last time the King visited Canada that I can remember was in 1939. It's quite a shock, though," he stated.

Wright Gives Views
His death will have little, if any effect, on the workings of the British government according to Gordon Wright, acting head of the history department, and Waldo Schumacher, professor of political science.

The government officials will take an oath of allegiance to the new sovereign, Queen Elizabeth II. Her coronation will not take place for about six months, until the formal state of mourning is over, Schumacher explained.

No Effect in Policy
British foreign policy will be little effected because the foreign minister, Winston Churchill, and his cabinet are responsible for the actual workings of the government. The royal family is more of a symbol than a working part, said Wright.

Train Plays Burglar

OKLAHOMA CITY (U.P.) — Policemen investigating the apparent burglary of the Mud Products Inc., building were mystified because whoever had pried the back door open hadn't stolen anything. Officers finally discovered it had been done by a freight train. A plank jutting from a car on the slow-moving freight had jammed against the door, forcing it open.

Students Enjoy SU Rec Program If Time Allows

By Jean Lewis

"Do you participate in the Student Union recreation program which includes bowling, bridge, billiards, square dancing and dancing lessons? What improvements would you suggest for the program?"

This was the inquiring reporter question asked Wednesday.

Some students did not have time to participate as fully as they wished. Others participated in various activities and said they enjoyed them, while a few thought that the program was not publicized enough to encourage maximum participation.

Jane Scott—freshman in liberal arts—"I think it's a very good idea but I wish I had more time to participate."

Joan Long—freshman in art—"I think it's a very good idea but there's not time for it and we can't get out of Carson at night for it unless we're on the committee."

Kathryn Hart—senior in history—"No, I don't because I'm married and I don't have time."

Jay Withington—freshman in liberal arts—"I participate in billiards and ping pong but square dancing doesn't intrigue me in the slightest, and the great majority of dancing lessons are a farce, anyway."

Carl Winans—freshman in pre-med—"I participate in all I have time for. Better publicity would help."

Jim Mahoney—sophomore in liberal arts—"I participate and enjoy, practically all the functions."

Ray Glass—senior in architecture—"I've learned how to Samba and how to play bridge."

Kenneth Peters—graduate in business and economics—"The activities of the Student Union are very good but it is unfortunate that there are some who don't realize the opportunity because it isn't publicized enough."

Donna Hart—sophomore in English—"It's a very good idea but people are not paying enough attention to the various activities. The mixers are improving but there needs to be more participation in such things as Sunday movies and browsing room lectures. If people would pay attention to the schedules in the living organizations it would help to increase participation."

Social Bridge To Follow Lessons

Bridge lessons, sponsored by the Student Union recreation committee, will be given in the SU at 2 p.m. today. Following the instruction by Gunning Butler, two hours will be devoted to the playing of social bridge.

An inter-collegiate bridge tournament will be held Feb. 14. The tournament is being held to select players from Oregon to compete in the regional tournament. Winners from this region will go to Chicago to compete in the national tournament.

Entrance in the tournament is open to any interested person. The deadline for registration is Thursday at 7:00 p.m. Interested persons are asked to contact Myrna Olson at Sigma Kappa for further details.
