

Honor Code Committee Hears Law School Plan

The senate honor code committee Thursday heard a report on the workings of the law school honor system and discussed the relationship between the present student court and the suggested honor council.

Orlando J. Hollis, law school dean, reported on that school's use and application of an honor system. (A complete article on this system will appear in the Emerald next week.)

Student court members Mike Adams, chairman, and Fred Risser pointed out to the senate committee that the ASUO constitution gives jurisdiction in all disciplinary matters to that court. They wondered if this might not be in conflict with the committee's suggested plan of an honor council and committee selected through the ASUO senate independently of the student court.

Article V Clause 3 of the constitution reads:

"The Court shall have jurisdiction in all disciplinary matters delegated to it by the President of the University or the ASUO Senate."

At present, the student court handles only traffic violation cases.

Committee members emphasized that their suggested plan was not definite. They will discuss the student court-honor council relationship at their meeting next Tuesday.

Freshman Women Asked to Pick Up Mid-term Cards

All freshman women who live in town instead of the dormitories have been asked to pick up their freshman mid-term grade report cards from Mrs. Edith Jacobs, counselor for women, or Mrs. Golda Wickham, director of women's affairs, in the office of student affairs, Emerald hall.

These cards are filled out by the freshman women and are then sent to instructors so they can check the student's progress. Cards were passed out in the dormitories but the freshman women not living in the dormitories can obtain them by going to the office of student affairs.

Freshman men have not been asked to fill out these mid-term grade reports this term.

Mr. Talbot visited the South American countries to photograph the ministry of the Bible Institute students serving in South America, and because of a present spread of religious fanaticism over these lands. J. Russell Davis, photographer and former missionary to China, accompanied Mr. Talbot.
