

Duck Tracks

The Beavers are coming, the game is in sight; the Beavers are comin', oh what a fight—but perhaps it is better that we should stick to prose and simply say that the annual vendetta between the two arch rivals in the Willamette valley will get off to a flying start Friday when the local Ducks travel to Gill Coliseum in Corvallis and match baskets with Coach Slats Gill's OSC Beavers.

The thought of Gill Coliseum takes us back to the Friday night of March last, when the Ducks, paced by "Yo-yo" Jim Loseutoff, Curt Barclay, and Bob Peterson boomed into the spacious new hoop plant for their third game with the Beavers. The Webfoots were fresh from a 82-75 victory over the Washington Huskies, later ND champions, and they had to win against the Beavers to have a chance for a tie against the men from Seattle.

The game started slowly, with the deliberate tactics of the Beavers setting the pace for a usually fast-break happy clan of Oregon hoopsters. Paranthetically, we might mention that they scored 52 points in the first half of that Washington game, so they usually had no trouble finding the most direct route to the basket.

But this was not to be their night. They blew an early lead and went into the final minutes trailing, although they narrowed the margin to 41-39 just before the finish.

It was then that one of the more memorable incidents of the 1951 season took place. There have been various versions of why it happened, but we would say that it was just plain built-up tension of a tight and crucial game.

Big Bob Peterson was attemption to intercept a Beaver throw-in from the sidelines with seconds remaining, when the riding of a fan frayed his nerves to the point of breaking, and he headed for that fan with blood i his eye.

They were soon separated, however, and Duck Coach John Warren escorted an angry Peterson off the floor. But it did not end there. Peterson showed himself sincerely sorry as he publicly apologized the next night at McArthur Court, and the Ducks rolled to a 67-42 triumph over the Beavers.

Pete May Get Riding

So do not be overly surprised if you hear Peterson get a very thorough riding Friday night in Corvallis. This time, however, he should undoubtedly take it in his stride.

Whatever else this coming weekend series with the Beavers will show, it will be the first time that freshman mentor Bill Borchter locks horns with the old pro of northwest basketball, Amory T. "Slats" Gill.

Gill first came to Corvallis in the fall of 1920 as a highly touted prep star from Salem high, and has been on the campus ever since, except for a one-year absence immediately after his graduation.

He took the OSC head post in 1928, and since then his teams have been Northern Division champions six times. They have won the PCC title three times: in 1933, 1947, and 1949.

The feelings of the Corvallis school regarding their veteran mentor could have been no more fittingly shown than when they named their 10,500 capacity basketball plant after him. Most honors of this type come posthumously, but Slats Gill is very much alive.

Borchter Wants Jazz Combo Back

Turning from Gill to Borchter, the Oregon coach was telling us Tuesday that he and his players enjoyed the swing music played by the small volunteer pep band several games back at McArthur court.

They also appreciate the larger band which has performed for the last few contests, but feel that the jazzy repertoire of the smaller outfit is more effective in relieving the tension. So they wish to ask if there is some way they can get the more syncopated combo back in action. Is there?

Decides Gorillas Can't Compete With Men

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (U.P.) — Gorillas can't keep up with this modern age.

A retired Yale professor, Robert M. Yerkes, predicts that within the next 100 years the popular zoo animal will be extinct.

Gorillas have "no chance of survival in competition with man," says Yerkes. "The animals either must be protected in their natural habitat or bred successfully in captivity. Otherwise they won't be around any more."

Billiard Finals Slated to Begin

The final qualifying rounds for the men's billiard tournament will be held Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Each player must have ten rounds in these final rounds, and he may play them either or both nights. The contestants for the national telephonic tournament will be picked from these rounds and the highest scores from the preliminary rounds.

All men who have entered the tournament are asked to come to these final rounds, Wednesday and Thursday night.

IM Track Schedule

Intramural track action will resume today after being cancelled conflict with basketball playoffs. Monday and Tuesday because of Sederstrom hall will meet Cherney hall, and Lambda Chi Alpha will meet Beta Theta Pi. Both cinder contests will start at 4 p.m.

Campus Interviews on Cigarette Tests

No. 35..

THE LARGEMOUTH BASS

Always a sucker for attractive bait, our aquatic brother went off the deep end and got caught on the quick-trick cigarette hook! But he wormed his way out when he suddenly realized that cigarette mildness can't be tossed off reel lightly. Millions of smokers have found, too, there's only one true test of cigarette mildness.

It's the sensible test—the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test, which simply asks you to try Camels as your steady smoke on a day-after-day, pack-after-pack basis. No snap judgments! Once you've tried Camels for 30 days in your "T-Zone" (T for Throat, T for Taste), you'll see why...

After all the Mildness Tests...
