

Deferred Living Favored in Report

4. An improvement is the freshman dormitory program, accomplishing of orientation more effectively.

5. Counseling program has improved, but more competent counselors must be provided. The program has been severely retarded because of lack of adequate counseling.

6. Greek houses have suffered financially. The administration should accept an active share of the burden of adjustment to Greek financial and social problems.

7. It is recommended that the alumni president appoint a similar committee to continue study of deferred living, with emphasis on status of Greek houses and overall effect of plan in accomplishing the four objectives outlined at its introduction—strengthening fraternities and sororities through a higher calibre of membership, better scholastic standing, greater responsibility in the houses and higher percentage of fraternity membership than possible before.

IRL Conference

ternative to war is some sort of agreement and negotiation which will eventually lead to appeasement."

On the subject of Red China the reports of the high school delegates differed. One group thought that Communist China should be allowed to enter the United Nations because they felt that once in the organization they could be "talked to" and this would lead to more understanding.

U.N. Should Halt China Trade
Another report stated that U.N. members should not have any trade with Red China, but it was amended to read that a minimum amount of trading could be allowed if the country's economic conditions warranted it.

Still another group, while on the subject of Japan, said that the Japanese should be allowed to trade "non-strategic" goods with Communist China.

Limited Japanese Army Okayed
On the subject of Japan the opinion was expressed that the islands should be allowed to build up a limited force for defense purposes. Also the United States should withdraw their troops slowly, while leaving the air bases and naval stations there.

After the last of the 12 reports were given an open discussion period under the direction of Moderator Schleicher was held. The convention wound up at noon.

New Officers Elected
New officers of the International Relations league are Don Zanicker of St. Helens, president; Dave Grimstead of Gresham, vice-president; Joyce Anicker of Tigard, secretary-treasurer; and Jule Beacon, of Eugene, historian.

Out-going officers are William McAllister, Medford, president; Susan Sandell, Jacksonville, vice-president; Jackie Robinson, Salem, secretary-treasurer; and Don Zanicker, St. Helens, historian.

Reds Not Found In Universities . .

tercede with the committee handling the bill, and that they, aided by ex-Governor Charles A. Sprague, now editor and publisher of the Oregon Statesman in Salem, succeeded in getting the bill tabled.

"The passage of this act," Byrne asserted, "would have been a serious step backward for higher education in Oregon."

Good People Needed in Government

In discussing the government role before alumni, Byrne said we must have good people representing us in local, state and national bodies, since government is affecting in many ways the lives of individuals.

"I am deeply concerned right now with the announcement of a large number of our best state legislators that they are not going to be candidates for re-election," he stated.

Alumni Important in Politics

He said he believes it is important for alumni to participate in securing good candidates or in actually becoming candidates themselves.

"I am not asking that alumni send to our legislature people who will vote higher appropriations for the University or the state system of higher education. Rather, I am emphasizing that a university should expect of its graduates active participation in government to the end that we may have good government at all levels."

Recruitment of Good Students

Byrne said alumni should help to increase the now relatively small proportion of top intellects in high school to attend college. Regarding present alumni recruitment of athletes, he said, "I still think that a good halfback, if he is also a good student, is a worthy object for the right kind of alumni encouragement. But I would like to see this role broadened into the recruitment of good students."

The chancellor said the encouragement didn't have to be financial help, but a "kindly discussion" with the students on the opportunity before him, and, if financial help is needed, the alumnus could enable the student to use University facilities set up for aiding him.

Ivory Tower Taboo

Discussing institutions of higher education, Byrne said no institution can be great or successful "if it withdraws to an ivory tower to pontificate and philosophize." "Certainly," he said, "(it) must be a leader in thought and blazing new trails, but it also must be alert to the needs and share in the dreams, the ambitions, the activities and the social and economic life of the people."

Byrne said Oregon higher education institutions are reaching a maturity in their development which alumni could be proud of. He said he hoped the roles were not selfish ones, but responsibilities owed to the University and the state.

De Chainé Leads Next Play Cast

Faber DeChainé will play a writer, Clark Storey, who never produces anything, in a coming campus production.

This role is the lead for the University theater's next production, "Second Man," which will open Feb. 29 in the arena theater.

In the play Storey lets himself be sidetracked by the pleasure of living rather than worrying about his work. The rest of the cast, as announced by Director Frederick Hunter, includes:

Dorothy Polanski, playing Mrs. Kendall Frayne, a wealthy society woman in love with Storey. Mrs. Frayne is willing to give him financial assistance. She is the most rational and emotionally stable character in the play.

Colleen Moore, in the role of Monica Grey, who imagines herself also in love with Storey. Young, pretty and romantic, Monica shuns Austin Lowe (played by Alan Barzman), who is in love with her.

Lowe is a brilliant young physicist who is an adviser to the atomic energy commission. In personality he is the opposite of Storey. Shy and ill at ease, Lowe finds it impossible to express his affection for Colleen to her.

Edward Tyler plays Albert, the boy who is a kind of servant to Storey.

City Public Opinion Lecture at 11 Today

Forces shaping public opinion in a small city will be the topic of Charles A. Sprague, editor and publisher of the Oregon Statesman in Salem, when he talks to the journalism and public opinion class at 11 a.m. today in 105 Journalism.

The talk is open to all interested students and faculty, Charles T. Duncan, associate professor of journalism and instructor of the course, said.

Sprague is a lecturer on the journalism school staff.
