

Borcher Slackens Hoopster Practices

By Larry Lavelle

Sensing that his Ducks will need all of the energy that they can muster for their annual Palouse picnic jaunt to Pullman, Wash., and Moscow, Ida., this weekend, University of Oregon Basketball Coach Bill Borcher cut short Monday's drill after an hour's workout.

The Ducks, finally recovered from their four-game collision with the now-Northern Division PCC champion University of Washington quint, have belatedly re-entered the battle for second place, now held by the University of Idaho Vandals.

Oregon toyed with the Oregon State college five last weekend winning by scores of 57-44 and 64-55. The victories enabled the Ducks to pull out of fourth place and pass the Washington State college Cougars. The Webfoots are one game behind the Vandals and boast a similar margin over the Washington squad.

The Eugene team has never swept the four-game Eastern swing but has won as many as three games on several occasions unproductive, although they opened with a one-point loss against Idaho.

Monday afternoon Borcher emphasized screening and offensive patterns for use against the Washington-Staters Friday and Saturday nights. The first-year mentor called a halt to the proceedings after running his charges through a fast conditioning drill and the customary free throw sessions.

Captain Kenny Hunt leads Oregon scorers with 119 points in 10 Northern Division PCC games, statistics released Monday by the athletic news bureau office reveal. Bob Peterson leads the Webfoots in the rebounding department with 155.

Bud Covey Adds Depth To Guards

A junior with two more years of college eligibility remaining is the status of Bud Covey, a stocky, hard-driving guard on Coach Bill Borcher's Webfoot hoop aggregation.

This unusual situation is due to the fact that last year's Oregon mentor, John Warren, decided to withhold Bud from competition not only to give him a little more seasoning but also because the Ducks were well-stocked with veteran guards, namely Jack Keller, Mel Krause, and Ken Hunt, to name a few.

This season, his first in varsity play, has seen the 5' 10" Covey act mainly as reserve strength for Borcher, generally in the late stages of the game when good ball handlers are needed to hand on to a lead.

Bud, who is majoring in history, lists Portland as his hometown, in which city he performed for Jefferson High school in both football and basketball.

In the grid sport Covey filled a backfield position for three years for Jefferson. During that period of time Jeff captured two city crowns and finished second in the state tournament in 1948. That was the year that Bud was named to the second string All-City squad.

Covey also put in three years of basketball time for Jeff, and was the spark of the 1948 team which swept to the city title only to lose out in the state playoffs.

As one of several promising sophomores on Borcher's roster, Covey helps to ease any Duck worries concerning the guard spot in the near future.

STRIKES and SPARES from the SU cellar

By Jim Mahoney

League bowling through the week continues its steady progress despite the absence of cheering multitudes. The ROTC Jets still lead the Monday night Faculty league with 14 wins and 6 losses. Col. Hanes holds the league high average at 163.

Tuesday intramural shows Theta Chi in the top spot with 15 out of 16. Ned Takasumi has the high average of 167.

Wednesday intramural honors Sigma Phi Epsilon at 15-5. Bill Perrett figures a score of 169 to take first place for averages.

Phi Kappa Alpha tally reads 17 for 3 for the number one spot in Thursday's intramural competition. This same team boasts Harold Ireland's 164 league leading average.

The best games of the week are as follows: Bruce Koppe, 541; Tom Macdonald, 530; Merv Englund, 522; A. P. Willey, 520; Sgt. Steiner, 518; Phil Settecase, 517; Art Keger, 516; R. J. Greiner, 510; Col. Hanes, 508; Dick Williams, 508; Ned Takasumi, 505; Don Theriault, 503; George Troeh, 503; Dick Nelfert, 500.

The absence of rooters for the bowling teams is in the form of a mixed blessing. While there is no one present to boo the losing squad, (a favorite pastime of Oregon students) it follows that there is also no one around to cheer the winners, buy Cokes and candy at the desk, or fill up the vacancies at the pool and ping-pong tables when bowling begins to pall.
