Fined for improper driving were Dale N. Daugherty, graduate in health education, $15.

Bryce Decker was fined $6 for improper turn.

Fined for defective brakes was Katherine Rabbitt, sophomore in liberal arts, $25.

Traffic light violators were James M. Johnson, freshman in physical education, $5; Richard Woodward, sophomore in physical education, $5; Saul Zaik, graduate student in architecture and allied arts, $5; Anthony Pontecorvo, graduate student in psychology, $5; Roy Morgan, senior in general science, $5.

Stop sign violators were Nicholas Collins, freshman, $5; Brent Bates, sophomore in speech, $5; Melvin Rudd, senior in business, $5; Robert Easter, junior in liberal arts, $5; Walter Martin, senior in music, $5; James Watkins, junior in business, $5; and Paul Weston, senior in architecture and allied arts, $5.

Theme Idea Asked For Jr. Weekend

Suggestions for the theme for Junior Weekend, May 9-11, can be dropped in boxes in the Co-op and Student Union beginning today. The contest will continue through Mar. 3. Winner of the contest will receive free tickets to the Prom and dinner for two.

Petitions for chairmanships of Junior Weekend will be accepted until 5 p.m. Thursday in room 303 SU. Those people petitioning for chairmanships are urged to submit weekend themes by the junior class officers.

The junior class officers, Mike Lally, president; Don Collin, vice-president; Jane Simpson, secretary; Herb Cook, treasurer, will make the selection of the chairmanships.

The theme will be selected by the Junior Weekend committee composed of the class officer and committee chairmen.

How Could You Let This Slip By?

Today Is National Pancake Day; Smile Week Is Due Before Finals

By Bill Gurney

Did you have pancakes for breakfast this morning? You should have, you know. For today is National Pancake day.

Coming right in the midst of National Sew and Save Week as it does, you may have overlooked it. There is a week in this country for nearly everything, although there may be need for a "May the Good Lord Save Us From Weeks" week:

Do you normally snarl at people? Have faith, for National Smile week is coming March 9-15. But get the smiles out of your system, for the week after that is University of Oregon Final Week.

Laugh—If You Can

With the spring flowers, comes National Laugh Week, (April 1-8) and Army Day is in the middle of it. Go ahead, laugh at the Army. While you can.

Also inspiring is the Honey for Breakfast Week, coming April 13-20. This one is a natural if you are in trouble with your wife (if you have a wife).

There is never a really dull week throughout the year—always something doing, except that you are not supposed to hear anything during National Noise Abatement Week (April 14-18).

From May 10 to 17 is National Frozen Foods Week, during which you should make a noble attempt to eat at least one frozen dish. Well, try an icebag for your hang-over, anyway.

This Is For the Men

June 14 is National Expectant Fathers day and if they possibly can at this late date; fathers should arrange to celebrate it smoking cigarettes in a hospital anteroom.

As the autumn approaches, there is National Sweater Week Sept. 5, and, in conjunction with this event we suggest the National Evil Leer week.

Oct. 18 is the logical time to be sweet, if you are capable of it—for this the Sweetest Day.

At that time, if you can make the switch, you might attack the appropriate dish for National Macaroni Week.

Come December, there is the National Prosperity Week, sponsored by the Christmas Club, which is along the line of a subtle hint that you really can afford to blow that savings account on presents for your girl.
