Management Spokesman to Speak

At his father's urging, he left school and went to work as assistant to a president of a small foundry in Decatur, Ill. In 1920 he bought the Liberty Foundry in Milwaukee, Wis., with a small down payment and 15 years to pay the balance. He has built it into the present Grede foundries, though the industry is not a business "giant" or even a big foundry company. It has six plants and employs 1100 persons.

As chairman of a foundry industry research group Grede pioneered in efforts to combat the disease silicosis, the efforts being followed by all-industry attention to industrial employee health problems.

Grede was greatly responsible in the development of what are now generally accepted foundry cost methods. An outspoken champion of the free enterprise system and individual freedom, he has been much in demand as a speaker before various groups.

Chairman of the successful Milwaukee YMCA building fund campaign last June, Grede says his principal hobbies are the YMCA and the NAM, because in both organizations he says he finds the same emphasis on the dignity of the individual in the American tradition of freedom.

While at the University of Wisconsin, Grede was a member of Delta Upsilon fraternity.

College Degree in Accounting Advantageous to CPA Applicants

Percentage of certified public accountant applicants passing the examination is higher for those possessing a college degree—with a major in accounting—according to the school of business administration.

The BA school indicated that practical experience is helpful to CPA candidates, provided they haven't been away from formal education too long. Percentage of those passing is lower for that group of candidates which has failed on three different attempts.

The examination is uniform throughout the nation, prepared by the American Institute of Accountants. It is also held at the same time in all states—in May and November.

The BA school offers three courses, which CPA aspirants usually take. They are CPA problems, auditing, and business law. Although these courses are intended to give the candidate specific training for the exam, it is desirable that he have a well-rounded formal education in the social and physical sciences, the business school said.

Examinations are given for four topics:

- Auditing,
  - Commercial law.
  - Accounting theory, and
  - Accounting practice.
- Two half-day sessions are set aside for the accounting exams practice, and one-half session is assigned for each of the other topics. The examination lasts three days.

Some indication of the percentage of passes can be obtained from fairly representative sample of examples from one state:

The Percentages

Auditing—20 per cent, Commercial law—40 per cent, Accounting theory—38 per cent, and Accounting practice—20 per cent. These figures, however, do not reflect the number of times the candidates took the examination.

Each state has its own requirements regarding such things as age, residence, formal education, and experience. Further requirements, including experience, apply to those passing the examination, before they can secure the CPA license.

Specific requirements of each state may be obtained by the CPA aspirant from the CPA law of his state.

Business Session To Open April 15

The 1952 session of the Student Business Conference will be held on April 15, 16 and 17, Victor P. Morris, dean of the school of business administration, has announced.

On the afternoons of these three days businessmen from Eugene, Portland and other Oregon cities will meet with small student groups to discuss the problems of the various areas of business as seen by the businessmen themselves.

Representative businessmen and women will also be present to discuss with the students their personal experiences in such fields as banking, insurance, merchandising, real estate, accounting and secretarial work. Certain specialized work such as the lumber industry and public utilities will also be discussed.

The conference will be held in the Student Union and will be open to any interested students and local businessmen, Morris said.

A. B. Stillman, professor of business, is acting as chairman of the committee for the business administration school.
