In the fourth stanza, George Shaw reached first on Cougar shortstop Jim Doyle's muf, Daryle Nelson walked, and Ron Bottler was hit by a pitched ball. Averill came to the plate with the bases full and promptly slammed a grand-slam homer over the center fielder's head to put the Ducks in the lead 6-2.

Two runs came to the Webfoots in each of the fourth and fifth frames, although they registered only one hit in each of the innings. By this time, it was evident that it was only a matter of how badly the Ducks would beat the visitors, and interest in the contest waned.

The box scores for the game reveal that Washington State scored one run on six hits, while the home team chalked up 14 counters on 12 bingles.

Bailey Performs

Cougar coach Buck Bailey gave the crowd of several hundred fans another of his three-act dramas, kicking the bats over a number of times and keeping a running fire of comment directed at the umpires and the members of both an honor system." (Ninety-nine per cent of Wheaton students made the same estimate.)

And, at Regis college, also in Massachusetts, a student had a similar opinion, but a different explanation. "There's hardly any creating here," she said. "We're proctored and wouldn't have the chance to cheat if we wanted to."

The answer of one Oregon student in the local poll indicated the general trend of answers here. This student, a sophomore in business administration, stated, "It all depends on the class. In one of my classes just about everyone cheats. In some of the others we are watched too closely for cheating to go on."

One student questioned by the Emerald said that in her school, architecture and allied arts, there is very little cheating due to the school's honor code.

More at Larger Schools?

According to the ACP, either there is more cheating done at larger schools, or students there are more aware of it than at smaller schools. Baylor university in Texas showed 35 per cent believing very few cheat, 36 per cent for about one-fourth, and 16 per cent for about one-half.

Syracuse university was even more extreme. Only 7 per cent felt very few cheat; 40 per cent thought at least half do.

Said a graduate student in psychology in a southern school, "Lower classmen—nearly always, upper classmen—not so much."

dent William C. Jones and will discuss the code from his own point of view.

The program will close with the argument against the honor code by the opposition speaker, not yet chosen. All talks will be approximately five minutes long.

Carey will moderate the question session; questions will be from the floor—directed at particular or any speakers.

For All Students

The assembly is being staged for all students, but off-campus persons who have not been contacted by orientation teams and all other students are especially invited, Hampton explained. He added, however, "All students are urged to attend."

Honor code orientation teams are now visiting living organizations and other groups and discussing the code with them.

interested high school seniors on the draft.

The meeting will be held in the Student Union, and the two officers will allot time on their program for a question and answer period.

Miss Wilkes Talks

Miss Wilkes re-emphasized her request that all living organizations contact the seniors who have been assigned to spend the weekend with them, welcoming the high-schoolers to Oregon and expressing their pleasure at having the seniors assigned to stay with them.

Figures released by Donald Dushane, director of student affairs, indicate that Oregon State has received replies from three high schoolers for every two replies received by Oregon's Duck Preview committee.

... A Real Oregon Welcome

According to John Whitty, publicity chairman for Duck Preview, this difference can best be offset by "having all the organizations contact their prospective guests and give them a real Oregon welcome."

Last year OSC outdrew Oregon 3 to 1 for the weekend, but in the fall enrollment of freshmen the two schools were almost equal.

two-base hit.

Bailey was largely responsible for slowing the game to a near crawl. Sporting his usual crimson cape, the Cougar ambled onto the diamond to talk to his pitcher three times in the first inning. (In the Pacific Coast League, the manager is obligated to wave in a new hurler if he goes to the hill TWICE in a single inning.)

Averill Stars

Averill lost one over the left-center field bank and batted in three more Duck counters to whittle the gap to 11-9. Three consecutive hits by Koeper, Handman and Franks increased the Cougar lead to 13-9 in the top half of the ninth.

Aune was credited with the win, in a contest which saw the Webfoots commit 11 errors, four of them by All-PCC second baseman Nelson.

Oregon leads the Northern Division PCC derby by one game over Oregon State, Washington and Idaho, who are bunched with a win and a loss, and the Cougars, two games behind with an 0-2 record.
