Science Building Dedication Program Includes Speeches, Discussion Periods

Dedication of the University's spanking-new science building begins today, with official ceremonies scheduled for 3 p.m. in the building's main lecture room.

The program, today and Saturday, will include talks and discussion by Oregon state officials, prominent scientists and University science faculty members. It will get underway with the official inspection of the three-stories-plus-a-basement building by the state board of higher education building committee at 10 a.m.

Besides the addresses of the dedication and science conference schedule, two open houses will be held, one for students, staff, families and friends of the University from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. today and the other for the general public from 9 to 10:30 p.m.

Last event will be a tour of the building, housing physics, chemistry and biology, and demonstrations—at 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

Speakers at the dedication ceremonies this afternoon will be Gov. Douglas McKay; President Edgar W. Smith of the state board of higher education; R. E. Kleinsorge, chairman of the building committee; Chancellor Charles D. Byrne of the state system of higher education; Alan T. Waterman, director of the National Science foundation; and Acting University President William C. Jones.

The following addresses will be given in the $1,600,000 building; all in the main lecture room:

"Science Looks Ahead," by Waterman, at 8 p.m. today.

"Problems in Modern Biology," by G. W. Beadle, chairman of the division of biology, California Institute of Technology, at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

"Chemical Institutions and Scientific Personnel in Europe," seminar address by G. Ross Robertson, professor of chemistry, UCLA, at 10:50 a.m. Saturday.

"Current Research in Nuclear Physics," by S. K. Allison, head of the Institute for Nuclear Studies, University of Chicago, at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Discussion periods will be held after all addresses except the one today by Waterman.

A dinner for visiting scientists and guests will be held by the Oregon chapter of Sigma Xi, science honorary, at 6 p.m. today in the Student Union.

A coffee hour and reception at 3 p.m. Saturday in the SU will feature a panel discussion on "Education for Science." Participants will be Allison, Beadle, Robertson, Waterman, Donald Stotler, supervisor of science for the Portland public school system; Clarence Diebel, science teacher at Eugene high school; P. J. Van Rysseberghe, professor of chemistry; and E. G. Ebbighausen, associate professor of physics, who will act as chairman.
