

Yankees Again Baseball Heroes

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Yankees are the world champions of professional baseball for the fourth straight year. The Yankees won the series Tuesday by defeating the Brooklyn Dodgers 4 to 2 in the seventh and deciding game.

It's the fourth time Brooklyn has fallen at the hands of the Yankees in the World Series. The other times were in 1949, 1947 and 1941. Before that the Dodgers were defeated in the 1920 and 1916 World Series. The Boston Red Sox beat them in 1916 and the Cleveland Indians in 1920.

The World Championship flag has never flown over Brooklyn.

Some of the reasons it isn't flying there today are these Yankee players: Mickey Mantle, who hit a home run and a single to drive in two runs today; Gene Woodling, who had a homer; 39-year-old Johnny Mize, one of the stars of the series, who singled home a Yankee run, and left-handed hurler Bob Kuzava, who blanked the Dodgers for the final two-thirds innings.

Groucho Marx to Help Campus Blood Drive

Groucho Marx, who will come to the campus in connection with the current Red Cross-Armed Forces blood drive, will attempt what generations of college students have said was impossible. He will try to get a pint of blood out of a faculty member.

Groucho is said to believe, despite all available evidence to the contrary, that such a feat is possible. It is reported that he will pin his hopes on instructors and assistant professors, hoping to reach them before ossification has set in. Deans and administrators generally are regarded as hopeless.

Condition of Marx' appearance on the Oregon campus was that his appearance be used to further the blood drive. The assembly committee, under whose auspices he appears here, has worked out an arrangement whereby all who give blood during the drive of Thursday and Friday, October 9 and 10, will be given special cards admitting them to a reserved section at the Marx assembly, December 2. The general public will only be admitted after the blood donors have been accommodated.

A special table has been set up on the terrace of the Student Union where students, faculty, and other interested persons, may sign up for the drive. It will be maintained during the afternoon today, or anyone may sign by calling the local Red Cross office, Ph. 4-5244. The bloodmobile will arrive on the campus Thursday morning.

Three donors will be chosen to meet Marx before the assembly, and perhaps be interviewed by him at the assembly, the committee announced.

Honorary Aids 'Chest' Drive

Skull and Dagger, sophomore men's honorary, will canvass men's dorms tonight in a fund raising drive for the Community Chest.

Collections for this year's Chest drive are being carried on in the living organizations. Representatives in each living group are asked to turn in their contributions to Don Crawford at Alpha Tau Omega or Janet Wick at Pi Beta Phi.

Edward Weeks to Describe Mid-Century Lit in Assembly

"Literature at the Half Century" will be the topic of the lecture Edward Weeks, Atlantic Monthly editor, will deliver in the Student Union ballroom at 1 p.m. today.

In his fourteen years as editor of the Atlantic Monthly, Weeks has constantly been on the lookout for new literary talent. His search has carried him to all parts of the country and made of him a virtual trans-Atlantic commuter in frequent trips to England and the continent.

Coupled with his manuscript reading of some twenty million words per year, his widespread talent searches qualify him to judge and observe the present literary scene.

Married and a father with a home on Boston's Chestnut Street, Weeks finds time "out from his almost constant reading to play golf and pool with equal gusto. Office interviews are shortened by seating visitors in an uncomfortable, straight-backed chair, a necessary device to maintain his rigid schedule of appointments.

The Bostonian is a successor to such Atlantic editors as James Russell Lowell and William Dean Howells. During his tenure, circulation of the magazine is climbed to over 160,000. Weeks is especially proud of the fact that his magazine has a wider circulation in New York and California than it has in Massachusetts, an indication of nationwide interest in that type of literature.

Reporting a shortage of good

short story writers, Weeks urges that young writers try to get a little more "sweetness and light" into what they write. While not objecting to stories about the out-cast and downtrodden when handled skillfully and realistically, he points to the fact that most stories of horror and violence are unrealistic and betray the author's lack of knowledge about the people he portrays.

Poetry, on the other hand, he finds on the increase. By this he means poetry "which is clearer and more meaningful." He is searching for a new American humorist.

Friday Is Deadline For Theater Tickets

University theater season ticket sales in UO living groups will end Friday.

Any living organization that still does not have a ticket salesman should appoint one immediately. The representative should obtain a receipt book from Gene Wiley, theater business manager, between 3:30 and 5 p.m. at the theater box office.

The house which has the highest percentage of its members buying tickets will win the contest. As winners, every member of the organization and his guest will be invited to attend, at no cost, one theater production chosen by the victorious group.

The individual who sells the most season tickets will receive an award at the annual theater awards picnic in the spring.

Positions Open For AWS Work

Petitions are still being accepted for the chairmanships of the Associated Women Students "Workshop" weekend, October 18. The "Workshop" is a convention for all AWS officials and deans of women throughout the state of Oregon.

The chairmanships available are: program, registration, publicity and luncheon. Petitions are due Thursday afternoon, and may be turned in at the AWS office in the Student Union, or to Joan Walker at Kappa Alpha Theta.

Phi Sigs to Pick Moonlight Girl, Announce Winner October 24

Phi Sigma Kappa's annual "Moonlight Girl" contest will begin with a dinner for the six finalists at the fraternity house on October 22. Women's living organizations on campus have already been invited to enter their selections according to John Waugaman, Phi Sig social chairman.

The members and pledges of Phi Sigma Kappa select the girl with whom they would like most to share some moonlight, Waugaman said. The winner will be announced at a fireside on October 24. Her picture will be sent to the fraternity magazine, the "Signet" along with the selections of the other 71 chapters of Phi Sigma Kappa. The organization to which the "Moonlight Girl" belongs will be awarded a trophy.

Last year's "Moonlight Girl" was Verla Thompson, a member of Alpha Omicron Pi.

First Frosh Exchange Desserts, Dinners, To be Held Wednesday

The first in a series of exchange desserts and dinners among the freshmen in the University of Oregon will be held tonight.

The desserts are being arranged in order that the freshmen might become better acquainted within their own class and will start at 6 p.m. and last until 7:30 p.m., according to Dorothy Kopp, head of the freshman social committee.

The dinners are being arranged under a committee composed of sophomores who are working through the freshman social chairmen and counselors. Thus far four dinners and one exchange dinner is scheduled, Miss Kopp said.

Big, Quiet Crowd

One young Ike supporter was wearing an Ike button as big as her head as she perched on her father's shoulders for a better glimpse of what was going on.

The public address system did not function during the first part of the speech, the only amplification being from the train microphones. View of the rear platform from which Ike spoke was obscured for many who could not see over the heads of the crowd. One man was heard to mutter, "that could be Stevenson up there for all I can see."

The Eugene high school band played preceding Ike's talk and as the train pulled out.

Eisenhower

He implied that America's future is hopeful with young people who have initiative, and said that the present leaders can leave certain truisms and axioms to act as guideposts. And, he said, we should be willing to tell about our mistakes, so that future generations may profit from them. "Let's not try to cover them up," he asked.

Of cardinal importance, he said, is the concept that our form of government is deeply founded in a deeply felt religious faith, that "all men are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights."

Our first objective, said Eisenhower, is to unseat the "shopworn administration in Washington," and we won't ask the party affiliation before this crusade of those who join in it. Unless we are spiritually, intellectually and militarily strong at home, he asserted, we can't lead the world toward general peace.

Ike said we must have honesty, decency, straightforwardness and provide our successors with real information—real lessons—drawn from history. We must have, he said, a government we can have faith in; though we may never agree in detail, we must in basic principle. And what we must agree, he contended, is that honesty, frugality, thrift and efficiency are important, that government must be a servant and friend to the people, not a master.

Atlantic Editor Sets Forum Talk Today

The coffee hour forum featuring Edward Weeks, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, will be held in the Dad's lounge in the Student Union at four o'clock this afternoon. Free coffee will be served. The purpose of this forum is to better acquaint the students with him and to allow further questions to be asked, reports Karl Harshbarger, chairman of the coffee hour forum.
