(Ed. Note: At the request of the Emerald, Sports Editor Frank Norberg of the Montana Kaimin, the Montana State university campus daily, has written a guest Duck Tracks. Subject: the Montana Grizzlies.)

The Oregon fans will see a Montana State university football team Saturday that is big, strong, and that can hit hard. They are demons on defense. They are, however, slow, weak on pass defense, and just plain unlucky. These qualities and weaknesses have been evident in every game the Grizzlies have played this year.

It is true that they have an almost impregnable defense. But you can't win football games on defense alone. The Grizzly offense has lacked speed and a passing attack. Coach Ed Chinske would give his right arm for a speedy break-away runner and a good passer—with a couple of good pass receivers thrown in for good measure.

Incidentally, 41 of the 87 points scored against the Grizzlies were scored by Colorado A and M in their 41-0 rout of Montana last Saturday. Montana's pass defense, was ridiculed by Don Burroughs, the Aggies' candidate for All-American, who hit his receivers with uncanny accuracy as he completed 11 out of 14 passes.

The hard-charging Grizzlies out-rushed their opponents in their first three games, but still lost. These losses were attributed to a weak pass defense, fumbles, and bad breaks.

Grizzlies Draw Blanks

In the opener against Utah State, the Grizzlies pushed the Aggies all over the field, but still lost the game, 7-0. The Aggies scored their touchdown on a pass after recovering a Montana fumble deep in Montana territory. Against Wyoming the following week, The Grizzlies outgained the Cowboys on the ground, but lost, 14-0, on two Wyoming passes.

Brigham Young university defeated the Grizzlies, 28-7, but was on the short end of the yards gained by rushing. BYU scored one touchdown on a pass, one on a pass interception, had one set-up by a pass, and another set-up by recovering a Montana fumble. BYU was leading, 7-0, going into the final quarter.

The Grizzlies were out-gained by Denver University, but the Grizzlies, for the first time during the season, scored when they had the opportunities. They defeated Denver, 17-7, and threw up an almost impregnable pass defense.

Injuries have also hurt the team. Dick Heath, a sophomore quarterback who looked exceptionally good as a freshman, had a shoulder separation in pre-season drills and has been on the sidelines since. Bob Graves, a senior halfback, received a concussion in the BYU game and will be out the remainder of the season. Frank Nickel, a sensational sophomore end, cracked some vertebrae in the BYU game and had to retire for the season. Billy Gue, a speedy sophomore halfback, injured his leg early in the season and has not seen action since.

Dantic Top Rusher

As far as stars go, there are few. Bud Bellis is an excellent punter, as his 42.4 yard average verifies. Bob Dantic, a 165-pound sophomore fullback, has proven to be the best Grizzly ground gainer in recent games. Murdo Campbell, a 170-pound sophomore quarterback, is becoming a seasoned signal-caller and safetyman.

But the unheralded linemen are probably the Grizzly's biggest stars. Captain Hal Maus, Ed Anderson, Don Gerlinger, and George Samuelson are standout ends; Gordon Jones, Owen Deuchier, Bob Lamely, and Bob Stewart are strong tackles; Bob Antonick, Jim Burke, Mel Ingram, and Don Little are dependable guards; and Joe Roberts and Marlyn Jenson are capable centers. Jim Murray, Mel Wickert, and Joe DeLuca are linebackers deluxe, and definitely deserve special mention.

This has been far from a successful season for the Montana Grizzlies. But the Grizzlies are in the process of re-building.

Former MSU freshman coach Ed Chinske was advanced last spring to head coach, and John Zegar, former head coach at Olympia Junior college at Olympia, Wash., was signed as line coach. They replaced Ted Shipkey and Fred Erdhaus.

Work on New Patterns

These two men, plus end coach Jiggs Dahlberg and backfield coach Harry Adams, have been working hard all year initiating new plays and formations and in working with the young, potential players of the squad.

Although they have not been winning games, they have been fighting, charging, and continually trying until the final gun. How many teams can push their opponents all over the field, out-rush them, lose the game, and then come back the following Saturday and fight just as hard, or harder? Just a few—and we believe that the Montana Grizzlies belong with that few.
