ARMISTICE FAILURE

Dictators Blamed On Middle Class

"To most people, the armistice of 1918 meant a happy ending to the fear and strife of war, but it was the beginning of another great struggle," Louis de Guiringaud, Consul General of France in San Francisco, said Tuesday.

Addressing an audience of about 500 people on the topic "Armistice Day 1952—A Bourgeois View," blamed the French middle class for failing to meet the needs of the people after World War I and thus paving the way for the rise of the European dictators.

The armistice ending World War II again raised the people's hopes that they were entering into a new and better world but "once again our hopes have been deceived and even more quickly than in 1918," the consul stated.

He continued by saying that the war was barely over when our ally, Russia, became our adversary. Man in Russia today is an instrument of the party, a slave of the state and has been forced to surrender dignity and personal freedom not only in Russia but in the satellite countries as well, Guiringaud claimed.

Nearly 700,000,000 people are under the domination of Russia, which controls the largest empire in history, Guiringaud said.

In the face of this huge force, it is important and re-comforting to see our reactions are not in vain. The Marshall Plan, the air lift in 1948 and the Atlantic Pact have all been instrumental in stopping the advance of Communism in Europe, Guiringaud believes. But, while the free world was concentrating on Europe, the "hot" war broke out in the East, in Korea, he stated.

Guiringaud pointed out that Korea is not the only place in Europe where people are fighting against Communism. The French are fighting in Indo-China and the British in Malaya are also fighting.

He emphasized the fact that the French are not fighting a colonial war in Indo-China, but that the people there are free. They are members of the French Union, but they have their own governments. He added that except for United States financial help, France has fought alone in Southeast Asia.

Armistice day commemorates great sacrifices and great hopes, but again we are facing tyranny and war, Guiringaud said. But, he stressed, these sacrifices have not been in vain. We are still free men able to face tyranny and resist slavery and believe in democracy, he said.

German Visitors Arrive To Study Interest Fields

Visitors from Duesseldorf, Germany will arrive on the campus today under the sponsorship of the Municipal Research and Service bureau.

Dr. Karl Andreas Bringmann, cultural editor of the Rheinische Post; Herman Jakob Dornscheidt, personnel officer for Duesseldorf, and Karl Heinz Monech, chairman of the Duesseldorf Youth group, came to the United States under the auspices of the State department and have been visiting in Portland for the last two weeks.

The three Germans serve on a committee known as the Duesseldorf Cooperative Active Team and are studying their respective fields of interest in this country. They will make the trip to Eugene with Alfred C. Shepard, assistant director for the Research bureau's Portland office, and will arrive at 11:00. Herman Kehrli, director of the Bureau reported Tuesday.

Bringmann, who is also the president of the Journalists Union of Rhineland-Westphalia, will tour the journalism school, meet the faculty and visit the Register-Guard. The other two gentlemen will be accompanied around the campus by Shepard.

300 Alumni Register For '52 Homecoming

Bobbette Gillmore, chairman of the hospitality committee in charge of registration for Homecoming announced that nearly 300 alumni registered for the two day affair. She stated that this represented only a small percentage of alumni here for Homecoming as a majority did not register.

Emeralds Boosting Brethauer Sent Out To 80 Sportsmen

Copies of today's Emerald are being dispatched to 80 sportswriters, sportscasters and coaches up and down the Pacific Coast, plugging Webfoot end Monte Brethauer for all-Coast in 1952.

Brethauer, who has received 94 passes during his collegiate career, is now the leading active pass-catcher in the nation. He passed Washington State's Ed Barker last week-end.

The entire column, Duck Tracks, has been devoted to Brethauer and comments by Len Casanova, Oregon coach, and Hal Dunham, Duck quarterback.

Prof May be Deported, Says Law

By Barbara Boushey Emerald Reporter

"If you happened to be in Peiping, the ancient capital of China, you could not have failed to notice a fine University in the southwestern suburbs," Shu-Ching Lee began as he told the story that led to the present threat of his deportation.

Lee, who received notice last week from the immigration authorities that he may be deported to his native Manchuria, was sitting behind the desk in his office in Commonwealth. He seemed pleased to tell of his alma mater.

"It is one of the finest Chinese universities," he continued reminiscently, "comparable to any American university in academic and physical environment." It is called the Tsing Hua university, he said, where he graduated in 1935. One of his classmates, Laura, was later to become his wife.

Border Education

Shortly after his graduation Lee went to the University of Wisconsin where he took his master's degree in 1938. When he returned to China the Japanese had occupied Peiping. The Tsing Hua university, along with two other universities, had moved to Ku-ming, near the Burma border, where they formed the National South-East Association university.

"This refugee university was founded by the Boxer Revolution Indemnity fund from this country," Lee said. "I was on the staff of the sociology department at this university for five years."

"Then in Sept. of 1944 I received a telegram, then Secretary of State." The University of Maryland, through the state department, was inviting him to come to this country to work on the China Atlas, a joint project between the University and the department of agriculture. Lee was in charge of the research on land tenure and land utilization.

Rushing Procedure Review Suggested

An administration committee to review and re-evaluate the present system of deferred living on the campus will be appointed following a recommendation of the University alumni association adopted at a meeting held in the Student Union Saturday.

Charles R. Holloway Jr., president of the association, announced that a proposal by George Stadelman of The Dalles advised further study be made of the present system of sorority rushing. Stadelman declared that under the present system neither the sorority nor the rushee has a fair opportunity to evaluate each other.

Campaign in Progress

Sorority rushing this term was held during new student week when freshman rushees were taking placement examinations.

Alumni secretary, Les Anderson told the association of a test campaign now in progress in Bend where the association is attempting to raise funds for two $500 scholarships. If successful, the association will conduct such campaigns in other cities.

Investigation Urged

A suggestion that further study be made on the criteria of awarding scholarships was given by Willis Warren of Eugene. It is his belief that scholarships are not always awarded to those students who need them.

A boost from $3 to $4 per year for membership dues was voted by the association with the new rates to become effective next July.

The meeting was held in conjunction with Homecoming activities during the past week-end and was the 73rd in a series of such annual meetings.

Wilson Stresses Personality Role

The importance of human personalities and the new role for arts and sciences in international cultural relations were points stressed Tuesday night by Howard E. Wilson, executive associate of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Wilson spoke at an open meeting of the International Relations club in the Student Union Dad's Lounge.

He pointed out that international relations are conducted by persons whose personalities are great influencing factors in the creation

Tennessee Williams Is SU Discussion Topic

"Moonlake Casino", a resort of doubtful reputation, is the theme in "Variation on a Theme-Tennessee Williams" to be discussed by Horace Robinson, associate professor of speech, at 7:30 tonight in the Student Union browsing room.

"Moonlake Casino" is used repeatedly in the Tennessee Williams plays for its emotional effect. The place has a strong connection with Williams and is thought to exist in reality near the playwright's home in Mississippi, Robinson said.

It is a "haunting theme" which reoccurs and intensifies in such plays as "Streetcar Named Desire," "Summer and Smoke," "Portrait of a Madonna" and the "Glass Menagerie." It is a constant factor in most of his plays; it always means the same thing, and has the same mood and flavor, Robinson said.

The "Casino" theme rarely becomes central in the play, he said, but it becomes strongly secondary as many of the characters "strong motivations originate there."

Robinson believes Tennessee Williams is probably the greatest young playwright on the scene today, with the exception of Arthur Miller. He said Williams' subject matter may be a little too raw for the reader at times, but of the two he thinks Williams is the most sensitive writer.

The speaker is director of the University Theater and active in the Very Little Theater in Eugene.

Marvin A. Krenk, former instructor of speech, will conduct a discussion period following the talk. Krenk is the author of "Rhythmania," a play presented by the Eugene Very Little Theater this summer.
