Cemetery Clean-up Scheduled for Sunday

The old Odd Fellows cemetery bordering the University of Oregon campus is going to be cleaned up this Sunday.

The clean up, sponsored by the Deodorized Order of the Skunks, Eugene High boy's service organization, will climax a month-long campaign by the Register-Guard and interested Eugene citizens to get the cemetery cleaned up.

The clean up is part of an overall "clean up Eugene" campaign

H. K. NEWBURN
... 'Grand Stinker'

being sponsored by the "Stinkers" which will start today at 1 p.m. with a parade in downtown Eugene. University President H. K. Newburn attended a banquet of members, parents and guests Wednesday night at the Washington park recreation center. Newburn told the group of almost 300, which attended the official opening of the drive, that he thought that "the University president had the title, 'Grand Stinker' by acclamation."

Business Backing

Taking part in today's parade will be the "Stinkers," Lions club members, Boy Scouts and members of the Marine corps. The service organization is being helped by Eugene businessmen and has the co-operation of Oren King, Eugene city manager, according to David Cass, student body president of Eugene High and member of the "Stinkers."

Sunday's 1 to 5 p.m. clean up will come just over a month from the day when the Register-Guard appeared with four front page pictures on the condition of the cemetery was in Oct. 12.

On Oct. 15, the Guard said, editorially, that the "old cemetery has become everybody's business." The editorial went on to say that the paper had been watching the situation during "more than 20 years of attending meetings, helping to raise funds for temporary clean ups, publishing innumerable stories and editorial appeals, and seeing committees appointed only to 'die on the vine'."

Past Action

Summing up the past action taken on the burial ground, the paper brought out three points.

1. The Odd Fellows lodge had ceased to have official control of the ground years ago.

2. That control passed to a group of trustees elected by plot owners at occasional meetings and the meetings have become fewer and fewer as families die out or move away.

3. Without funds and well defined powers, the trustees are powerless to do anything except for occasional clean ups, with some city help.

The editorial went on to say that under the law there were only two alternatives for solution of the cemetery problem. The first solution was to remove the bodies and markers to a more suitable location. The editorial pointed out that the expense of such action made it almost prohibitive.

The second solution would be a program to replace the present headstones and markers with nameplates laid flush with the ground so that the area could be landscaped and planted in lawn fairly cheaply.

Biggest Problem

However, the paper pointed out that the biggest problem under any action would be finding each of the more than 600 plot owners and obtaining their legal consent for the change and obtaining "quieting title" when owners or heirs could not be found.

Remedy

The Deodorized Order of the Skunks hopes to remedy this situation somewhat, Cass stated. The group, which has asked the University fraternities for help in their project, plans to paint and distribute ash cans in the area in an effort to keep the cemetery and Eugene cleaner, Cass said.

Wednesday the service group is sponsoring a dance at the Elks Temple to raise funds for their campaign. Dell Kenfro's band will play and the dance is open to the public, Cass stated.

Drummond Speaks At Forum in SU

A Coffee Hour forum for Roscoe Drummond, Washington correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, will be held Monday afternoon at 4 p.m. in the SU Dads' Lounge.

Mr. Drummond rode on the trains of the two recent Presidential candidates and should be well qualified to comment on the future possibilities in the nation's capital, according to Karl Harshbarger, chairman of the Coffee Hour forum committee. Free coffee will be served by the House staff.

No "Friday at Four" Due to Missing Band

There will be no "Friday at Four" program today due to the unavailability of the jazz band, reports Dorothy Anderson, chairman of the Music committee. The next "Friday at Four" is scheduled for December 6.

Phi Beta Honorary Holds Ceremonies For New Pledges

Ceremonies for seven new pledges of Phi Beta, professional music and speech fraternity, were held last night at the regular chapter meeting in the Student Union.

Those pledging were Tamson Breesse, Jeanette Stone, Dorothy Noonan, Kay Maloney, Mary Cochran, Margaret Powne and Kathryn Clark.

President of the group is Sharon Anderson.

Fishbowl Mixer Scheduled Tonight

Another Fishbowl mixer is being held tonight in the SU fishbowl with dancing to records and intermission entertainment. This dance is free and begins at 9 p.m. Campus clothes will be worn.

Ed Kenney is going to sing during the intermission and there will be other performers, their names not being available now, reports Jackie Steuart, chairman of the SU dance committee, Miss Steuart urges everyone to come, with or without a date.

The next mixer of this type will be held on Friday, December 5, after a basketball game with Stanford here. Decorations and special entertainment numbers are being planned for this dance, according to Miss Steuart.
