

German Table Added To Language Program

A German table for all students interested in German will be held in the Student Union at noon today, according to W. A. Roecker, assistant professor of German.

This is the newest in a series of foreign language tables sponsored by the University's department of foreign languages. The other tables sponsored by the department include the Spanish table which meets on Wednesday and the French table which meets on Tuesday.

Soph Group Slates Meeting For Dance

An initial meeting of the Sophomore Whiskerino decoration committee will be held Thursday in the Student Union at 4 p.m. according to Sylvia Wingard and Jim Light, co-chairmen of the decoration committee.

Members of the decorations committee are: Kay Partch, Loie Mead, Patty Jeske, Bill Spores, Pat Eard, Diane David, Jill Kearns, Leland Nee, Claudia Cassidy and Sally MacIntyre.

Committee members are urged to contact Miss Wingard to Alpha Phi or Light at Phi Delta Theta before Thursday noon. Decorations to carry out the Whiskerino theme, "Whisker Whing-Ding", will be discussed and decided upon at the Thursday meeting.

Students meet for lunch at the tables where informal conversations are carried on in French, Spanish or German. The meetings are supervised by faculty members of the department. Those participating in the lunch meetings include language students, students who have lived in France, Spain or South America and Germany, graduate assistants and those people who are interested in the language, according to D. M. Dougherty, head of the department.

Needles Frighten London Burglar Into Swift Retreat

(P)—And the latest story about the brave storekeeper lady who scared off the robbers comes from London, England, where this is reported to have happened Tuesday night.

A masked bandit walked into a store, and said: "This is a holdup." The store lady, Mrs. Amy Hancock, looked up from her knitting, and sent the bandit fleeing with these words: "Don't be silly. I'll stick these knitting needles into you."

REPORTERS MEETING

CLINIC HELPS

CLINIC STUDIES SPEECH PROBLEMS

By Elsie Schiller
Emerald Reporter

The patter of little feet and the sound of children's voices on the first floor of Villard hall, or anywhere else for that matter, was rather a surprise to your Emerald reporter on his first flying trip to cover the speech department.

Since those long ago days at the beginning of the term he has had time to uncover the reasons for said children in Villard and in the process learn much of the interesting work now being done by the University's speech and hearing clinic.

The clinic was set up about 12 years ago to offer student training in speech correction work while at the same time presenting facilities for the rehabilitation of children with speech handicaps. It has also provided situations and opportunities for graduate and professional research in this field.

Only Training Clinic

Kenneth S. Wood, associate professor of speech and director of the clinic for nine years, has contributed much to the development of the clinic as part of the University speech department. It is the only training clinic in speech corrections in the state under full-time operation, Wood said.

There are 25 to 30 children ranging from three to sixteen years of age now under the guidance of the rehabilitation program. Problems studied and corrected by the 21 students working in the clinic include cleft palates, paralysis, emotional disturbances, stuttering, delayed speech development and hard of hearing as they affect the speaking abilities of the patients.

The clinic works in cooperation with the crippled child division of the University's medical school and the state department of education. Separate rehabilitation centers for the cleft palate and stutters have been set up in conjunction with the medical school.

Excellent Training

The clinic has proven an excellent training opportunity for students interested in this field, Wood said. He also pointed out that the field of speech correction is rapidly expanding and that all trained graduates are easily placed.

The state of Oregon needs more speech correctionists and the field is wide open, he emphasized. Some graduate students have secured jobs on a starting salary of $4,800. He estimated that there is a national need for 20,000 more trained workers.

The type of work done in the clinic necessarily varies with the problems of the children involved. Useful methods now being employed include lip reading, play therapy and tests of the hearing ability and the personality of the individual child.

Present results of the work being done in the clinic are very satisfactory, Wood reported. Improvement or elimination of the handicaps suffered by the children are quite rapid under the extensive guidance program.

Personnel Group And SU Board To Meet Today

The Student Union personnel committee meeting is today in the Directorate office of the SU at 4 p.m., according to Andy Berwick, chairman of the directorate committee.

The Student Union board will meet today at 3:30 in 337 SU. The agenda for today's meeting will be:

1. A request from the coffee hour forum committee for faculty membership.
2. A review of past policies of the SU board bringing them up to date.
3. A report on the Don Cossack concert.
4. The appointment of a committee to screen special attractions.

Singers Called For Musicale

Tryouts for the four main singing roles in "Bridgeman" will be held Tuesday, December 6 at 7:30 p.m. in the music school auditorium.

The show is scheduled to run May 22, 23, 25, 26, 27, June 3 and 4, but because Horace Robinson, University theater director, will be away from the University on a leave of absence winter term, auditions are being held early. Donald Allton, assistant professor of music and musical director of the show, will coach the soloists during winter term.

Any University student, regardless of his major or class, is urged to tryout for one of the four singing roles, according to Robinson. The two leading women's and the two leading men's roles will be cast from these auditions. Dramatic roles, dancing and chorus parts will be auditioned later.

Anyone interested who cannot be at the tryouts should contact either Allton or Robinson.

Hunter Schedules 'Salesman' Tryouts

Tryouts for the University theater's third production, "Death of a Salesman", will be held Monday and Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the laboratory theater, Villard, 102.

The play, a modern drama, contains some very strong dramatic roles, according to Fred Hunter, director of the production. Both men's and women's roles will be cast from these readings. The production will run Feb. 6, 7, 10, 11, 12 and 13.
