The Nation and the World...

Sergeant Accused Of Selling Secrets

Compiled by Andy Salmins Emerald Assistant Wire Editor

(AP)-A Far East Air Forces staff sergeant was charged Monday in Tokyo with conspiring to sell secret military_information to the enemy. He was identified as Giuseppe Cascio of Tucson, Ariz.

The sergeant has been charged on sixteen counts with accepting military payment certificates from a Korean civilian, and the Air Force said Monday night that the sergeant received secret data from staff sergeant John P. Jones of the headquarters squadron.

The Air Force doctors have declared Jones insane and no charge has been made against him. The maximum penalty facing Cascio is life imprisonment.

Meat Price Ceilings Off

(P)-Monday expired the deadline set by the boss of the Office of Price Stabilization, Tighe Woods, on action or explanation by his exh perts on a roll back of retail meat e prices. Woods told his staff last week: "either write out the order " "or tell me why it can't be done."

The experts answered Monday that they were not ready to do either thing and asked for a two day extension of the deadline to have more time to study ind reports.

A few hours later the OPS lifted led the ceilings on wholesale pork prices, which action was followed ach fshortly by an announcement from the Woods, government price stabilizer on; for the last three months, that he the will resign at the end of the month.

Tax Cuts May Wait Says Taft

elp" (P)-Sen. Robert A. Taft said ing Monday in Columbus, Ohio, that depublicans probably will not cut laxes at once.

ak-, "It isn't desirable," he comnow mented, "to balance the budget vere before reducing taxes." He addlfil- 'ed that congress could cut about ght- eight million in taxes by letting of a number of special tax measoul ures die next June.

ard Taft said that the measures he the star referring to were taxes on exth iss profits, excess income and

Book Review

The aim of the anthology was to cover in new and unusual manners all the standard themes, such as time travel, cybernetics, symbiosis, as well as the problems of sociology, economics, politics and wars of the future. This purpose was comprehensively, if extremely unevenly, achieved.

From Sensitive to Stupid

The stories range all the way State board. from Kris Neville's beautifully written and sensitive "Bettyann" to the forced and stupid satire of Fenton and Petracca, who are Grade B screen writers, not science fiction men. story, "Tolliver's Travels" is doing in a book purporting to be good SF is beyond us. There are a couple of other highly questionable items in the collection also, but the rest make up for them.

Old Theme

A. E. Van Vogt's story "Fulfillment" concerns an old theme, the computing machine which finds itself in the position of Des- erroneously stated in the Emerald. cartes-"I think, therefore I am." This machine's thoughts extend to the conquering of the world. It makes a fine story. "B plus M"-Planet 4" by Gerald Heard and "In a Good Cause" by Isaac Asimov take up the wide field of solving the world's future sociological and political 'problems. The first story does it with a symbiotic pairing of the plants, the bees, and man, borrowed from Mars. The second, and the better story, unifies man's solar system through the threat of outer-Galactic invasion. It also poses a question when the unification is achieved, not by the visionary idealist, but by political chicanery. "The end justifies the means" seems to be the conclusion.
