

Senators Discuss Freshmen Election Ballots, Carson Hall Funds, Homecoming, Duck Preview

The ASUO senate decided Thursday evening to ask the constitution committee's advisory opinion on several freshman class ballot proposals.

The senate heard proposals by Donald DuShane, director of student affairs, one being that candidates for representatives could be elected separately to each position. Last year's president, vice-president and both representatives from the freshman class were candidates for president and were elected by popular vote for that office.

DuShane said that a split ballot could be considered to be a "trick" or "legal device" which might be declared unconstitutional if used.

Split ballot candidates for president and representatives would be listed in separate groups.

Two As One

The split ballot, said DuShane, could be considered as two ballots being printed as one.

The senate voted to send DuShane's proposal to the constitution committee and ask if they are constitutional and would satisfactorily elect representative candidates to office.

Jody Greer, ASUO senator-at-large, gave a final report as the chairman of the committee to investigate the social fund at Carson hall. Miss Greer stated that the entire budget will be explained to Carson hall residents at their next house meeting.

Miss Greer also reported that $303 had been spent from the fund to buy an Encyclopedia Britannica and an unabridged dictionary. She also stated that the house council — composed of house officers, floor presidents and unit representatives — decide during spring term if the hall will support a foreign student during the following year.

Financial Success

Bob Metz, Homecoming chairman, reported that Homecoming was a financial success and gave a list of suggestions for next year's Homecoming. By request of the senate Metz recommended that judging of the noise parade be based on amount and originality of noisemaking, spirit, and participation.

Students to Obtain Signatures From Departments Before Vacation

Students are required to obtain the departmental signatures for all courses in which they are enrolled by Wednesday, according to Clifford L. Constance, registrar. Faculty members are not required to be in their offices after that date. It is not necessary to complete the remaining steps in the registration procedure until after Thanksgiving.

Early Monday afternoon approximately two-thirds of the expected 4000 students had picked up their pre-registration material at Emerald hall. The material will also be available Tuesday and Wednesday. Attendants reported that there was little rush Monday, "just a steady flow."

Full-time undergraduate students who were enrolled fall term are required to complete all steps with the exception of payment of fees by Dec. 6, or pay at least a $5 penalty fee.

After the necessary signatures have been obtained, students are to check with the Office of Student Affairs and the Registrar's office, both in Emerald hall.

Cards to be filed and picked up for payment Jan. 5 through 10 may be picked up at Emerald hall by students who do not plan to pay their fees in advance. For those who plan to pay now, a fee assessment should be obtained. Veterans on P.L. or 346 must check with the registrar.

The registration procedure is not complete until all of the above steps have been completed. Pre-registration will continue until Dec. 6. Regular registration will be held Jan. 5. The deadline for registration or freely changing classes by other students is Jan. 19.

Oregon SU Site For Northwest Bowling Meet

The Student Union is the proposed site for the 1953 bowling tournament of the Northwest division of the Association of College Unions according to Richard Williams, director of the SU.

Williams, who attended a recent conference of the Association, said that the directors from the various student unions represented at the meeting agreed to go ahead with a proposal to have a Northwest Division bowling tournament in the Association with Oregon, Washington, Idaho and British Columbia allowed to participate.

This tournament would be sponsored by region 21 of the association, in which Oregon belongs, and would be similar to the bowling tournament held by the big nine eastern colleges. The tournament will be held in April each year with the University of Washington as the proposed site for 1954.
