The school that "plays football for fun" and wins, too, probably will be added shortly to the University of Oregon football schedule for 1953. San Jose State, the institution that no longer lures athletes with scholarships, but nonetheless came up with six wins and three defeats last season, rounds out what should be Oregon's most interesting grid menu yet offered.

And gaining a place on the Webfoot schedule at Eugene's Hayward Field is a real break for the Spartans, whose position in the football world is a bit unstable now that their natural rival from Santa Clara has given up the ghost. The Broncos cancelled out of intercollegiate football after taking two consecutive seasons of whippings at the box office, despite an attractive schedule.

As a result of the Broncs' fold-up, the Spartans' list of games was reduced to five signed contests—Brigham Young, College of Pacific, Fresno State, Stanford and Arizona State (Tempe). San Jose Publicist Danny Hill may have been talking with tongue-in-cheek when he was quoted as saying, "San Jose will play football if it has to play junior college opponents." Obviously San Jose would rather play Oregon than San Mateo JC for the prestige if nothing else.

'Encouraging Reactions'

At the time of Santa Clara's collapse Hill said that "we are negotiating with two more Pacific Coast conference schools (Oregon and the other presumably, California,) which now has two open dates, although we aren't at liberty to announce those now." Hill continued, "we have had encouraging reactions from several schools for games in 1954 and 1955 and we think we can look ahead to playing on a major basis, even without scholarships."

Coach Bob Bronzan of the Sparts merited rave notices from the Bay press by coaxing his "play for fun" boys through those six wins, and ironically there was speculation that Bronzan might go to Santa Clara after the resignation of Dick Gallagher, who rejoined the staff of the Cleveland Browns of the NPFL. It might also be added here that one California paper reported that Oregon's Assistant Football Coach, Jack Roche was high on Santa Clara's list.

For the record, San Jose, a co-educational school some 50 miles south of San Francisco with an enrollment above the 6,000 mark, defeated: San Diego State, 47-6; Arizona State of Tempe, 21-14; Fresno State, 40-6; College of the Pacific 26-21; Brigham Young, 44-27; and Montana, 39-20. The University of Colorado Buffs trimmed SJS, 20-14 in the opener; Chuck Taylor's Stanford Indians dropped the Spartans, 35-14; and Santa Clara upset the San Jose eleven, 15-7 in the Broncs' swan-song production.

Six 'Home' Games

So not only did Oregon Athletic Director Leo Harris put the finishing touches to that appetizing home slate of UCLA, Idaho, Oregon State, Southern California and Washington, but he made friends or cemented friendship with the Spartans, who ought to be ever grateful. The more Pacific Coast conference teams the Spartans play means a more representative schedule for them and more recognition nationally. And the more recognition they gain the easier it will be for them to fill out subsequent schedules.

Thus, the 1953 Oregon football schedule is as follows: Sept. 19—Nebraska at Lincoln, Nebr.; Sept. 26—Stanford at Palo Alto; Oct. 3—UCLA AT EUGENE; Oct. 10—Washington State at Pullman, Wash.; Oct. 17—WASHINGTON AT PORTLAND; Oct. 24—SAN JOSE STATE AT EUGENE; Oct. 31—SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA AT PORTLAND; Nov. 7—IDAHO AT EUGENE; Nov. 14—California at Berkeley; Nov. 21—OREGON STATE AT EUGENE.

Football schedules for 1954 and 1955 are either close to completion or official. Next year's is as follows: Idaho at Spokane, Stanford at Portland, Utah at Eugene, California at Berkeley, Southern Cal at Portland, open date on Oct. 23, Washington at Seattle, UCLA at Los Angeles, Washington State at Eugene and Oregon State at Corvallis (in the new Beavers' Stadium).

Another Schedule

1955—Utah at Salt Lake City; Southern Cal at Los Angeles; Washington at Portland; Colorado at Eugene; California at Portland; Arizona at Tucson, Ariz.; Idaho at Eugene; Washington State at Pullman, Wash.; Stanford at Palo Alto and Oregon State at Eugene.

Genius of the year 1952—it must be Harris who talked USC out of a coliseum date this year and talked them out of transferring the 1954 game to Los Angeles.

Second Lecture To Feature Hollis

The second lecture in the Browning room Winter series will feature Dean Orlando Hollis of the law school speaking on "The Early Experience of the Supreme Court with Civil Rights." A discussion of the topic will be led by Professor Charles G. Howard, also of the law school. The lecture is scheduled for January 14.

Following on January 21, will be a talk on Paul Douglas' book of "Ethics in Politics" by Dean of Administration W. C. Jones. The discussion after the lecture will be conducted by William M. Tugman, editor, Register-Guard.

Present Enrollment Tops 2500 Mark

With three days of post-vacation registration completed, 2571 students have finished registration procedures and the payment of fees. A winter term enrollment of 3900 is anticipated by Clifford L. Feance, registrar.

Fees must be paid by noon Saturday to escape assessment of a late payment fee. Jan. 19 is the last day for changing classes. After that date students who drop or change courses must obtain a grade from the instructor.

Admission to this weekend's games with Washington State college will be by winter term athletic cards. The cards may be obtained upon presentation of the winter term student body card at the athletic office in McArthur court.

J-School Receives Allen Fellowship

For the second year, the Eugene Register Guard presented the Journalism school with $1000 for the Eric Allen Memorial Fellowship.

This fellowship, which last year was awarded to Harold Hughes, city editor of the Astoria Budget, is annually presented to an outstanding journalist. There are no restrictions of age, sex, year in school or previous experience involved in applying for the award.

The selecting committee for the fellowship consists of: Alton F. Baker, Sr., publisher of the Register Guard or a representative designated by him, president of the board of trustees or a representative designated by him, and Dean Gordon A. Sabine of the School of Journalism.

Fishbowl Mixer

Campus clothes will be in order for the first fishbowl mixer of 1953, sponsored by the Student Union dance committee. The no date dance is Friday after the Washington State-Oregon basketball game.

Don't start that bonfire till the game is over

That was no crying towel; that was my old school tie!

Once there was a basketball team that was the Hottest Thing in the Conference—until its high-scoring center, a 6½-foot Lump, of dubious intellect, developed a bad attack of the Flunks, and wound up Number 1 on the Ineligible List. This with the team right up against the Crucial Game for the Conference Title.

The first half was Grim. Our boys limped off to the dressing room trailing by 30 points. The Coach had just embarked on a touching Word Picture of himself, his wife and three helpless dependents Starving in the Streets, when in burst the Assistant Manager, trundling an overflowing wheelbarrow. In it were telegrams—hundreds of 'em—from fraternities and sororities, the head of the Student Council, the Dean, the faculty, the janitor, from practically Every Student on Campus—all bearing the stirring exhortation "Win this one for Old Blackstrap!"

Was the team Buoyed Up? Oh buoy! Won by 4 points, in overtime. They're now known around the conference as the Western Union Wonders.

Seriously, there's nothing like a Telegram to put heart into the guy—or the team—that gets it. Likewise, there's no nicer way to say "Well Done!" In fact, for just about any communique . . . whether it's a Flash for Cash to the Folks Back Home or Soft Words to a Distant Damsel . . . it's better to make the pitch via Western Union.
