

Frosh Quintet Humbles Clark, Oregon Tech

Forward Kent Dorwin and Center Gary McManus handled the heavy end of the scoring for the University of Oregon Frosh as they defeated Clark College (Vancouver, Wash.) 72-69 and the Oregon Tech junior varsity, 70-55 last weekend in McArthur court.

Dorwin, a slim, 6-2, 170 pound Oakland, Calif., lad, recorded 21 points Friday night as the Webfoots warded off a desperate Penguin upsurge to collect the win. Dick James and Bob Hazel scored 14 and 13 points apiece for the winners. The quarter scores favored the Ducklings, 21-15; 36-27, and 56-45.

Paced by reserve Center McManus, who scored 14 times, the Webfoot juniors raced to a methodical win over the Klamath Falls five, building up their lead gradually. Oregon led at the quarters, 18-15; 31-28; and 51-47. The losers fell apart in the final quarter, scoring but eight times.

Webfoots Rout Tail-enders, 74-49 Staters Stone Cold in First Half

By John Whitty
Emerald Sports Editor

Bouncing back after two successive beatings at the hands of the Washington Huskies last week, Oregon's surprising basketball quintet completely blanketed the visiting Washington State college Cougars in the first contest of a two-game series at McArthur Court Friday night, downing the visitors by a 74-49 count.

It was during the first half that the Webfoots exhibited their superiority over the men from the Palouse hills to the greatest extent. The Washington Staters were unable to make even one point per minute in the first two periods, with the halftime total of the visitors amounting to only 15 counters on four field goals and seven gift tosses.

Noe Leads Off

Big Chet Noe opened the scoring for the contest with a tip-in after approximately a half-minute of play, and from that point on, it was definitely Oregon's game. At the end of the first stanza, Oregon led by a score of 17-5, and WSC coach Jack Friel, a veteran of 25 years in the Northern Division, sent in his second platoon in hopes that the jinx could be broken.

Rather than improving, the situation went from bad to worse for the Cougars, and at one point in the second quarter the Ducks held a lead of 35-7. The unexciting tilt continued until at the end of the half the score stood Oregon 40, Washington State 15.

In the first half, the Cougars hit only four field goals in 32 attempts for a poor shooting average of .125, while the Webfoots connected on 12 out of 32 tries at the hoop for a better than average .428 shooting mark. The Ducks nabbed 29 rebounds to 14 for the visitors in the first 20 minutes of play.

Ducks Hold Edge

The last half of the tilt was even less interesting than the first, for the Webfoot cagers maintained their 25 point lead, while the Cougars also began to hit the hemp fairly regularly, thus erasing the novelty provided by their inability to score earlier in the contest.

One aspect of the game which aided the Ducks in their victory was the number of free throws missed by Washington State. The mediocre average of .406, as contrasted with the creditable .667 percentage recorded by the Ducks.

Twelve of the fourteen players used by Oregon hoop coach Bill Borchert during the course of the game entered the scoring column, with 6-foot, 7-inch Chet Noe collecting 19 points to gain scoring honors for the evening. He was followed in the total points column by junior guard Ken Wegner with 14 and forward Ed Halberg, whose five field goals netted him a total of 10 points.

Webfoots Rebound

Perhaps the whole story of the game can be known by a look at the rebound statistics. Oregon cleared 57 from the boards to 33 for the Cougars. This coupled with the low shooting percentages made by the visitors provided the margin of victory for the home quintet.

Borchert Quint Triumphs, 75-61

By Larry Lavelle
Emerald Sports Editor

Treating the Washington State college Cougars as if they were long-lost cousins—and unwelcome ones at that—the University of Oregon Webfoots clipped the visitors 75-61 Saturday night in McArthur court to vault into a second place tie in the Northern division PCC standings.

A couple of Oregon's picket men, Chet Noe and Ed Halberg, had a head on the offensive bucket with a pair of plus .500 shooting averages for the night's work. Noe attempted 13 and hit seven times for a .538 percentage and Halberg found the range for a .667 bark—six for nine. Noe and Halberg were the game's high-point men with 21 and 14 points respectively.

Cougars Hold Up

The Webfoots were slow to ignite and the Cougars made a game of it until the early part of the second quarter when the score was even at 20-20. Keith Farnam led off with a charity toss but the Cougars came right back on the strength of Pete Mullins' 20-foot cast from the left side stripe and followed up with four more points for a surprising 6-1 edge. Barney Holland swished a long set shot from behind a screen and the Ducks gradually pared the lead until Noe dropped through a couple of free throws at the end of the period. Oregon led, 17-16.

A free toss by Mullins and Center Bill Rehder's lay in knotted the issue at 20-20 whereupon the Ducks broke the game apart. Holland drove through for a lay up and dropped in a set shot; Noe hit with a close in shot; Halberg deposited a free throw; and Noe right armed a 10 foot hook to put the Webfoots out in front, 29-20 at the 3:04 mark of the second quarter. Oregon increased its edge by three and the halftime reading was 38-26.

Noe and Halberg each hit the hoop for seven points in the third period and Cougar Coach Jack Friel unsuccessfully juggled his lineup but the build-up continued and Oregon had a 59-42 cushion at the three-quarter mark.

A Big Lead

Midway in the final stanza Big Hank Bonneman, who had a night for himself—especially in the rebounding department, came through with a follow shot which gave the Webfoots their biggest working margin of the evening—74-49.

Washington State's first platoon handled the ball a bit better than the night before, setting up their plays well, but they were just as far off their shooting sticks as they had been Friday, hitting a meagre .344 from the floor and 17 of 25 freetosses.

The Webfoots teamed for a .410 field mark and cashed in with 25 for 33 attempted free throws. Farnam, with 10 rebounds, topped that department; and Rehder, with 12 points, led the WSC tossers.
