Willamette, Tributaries Crest, Flood Lowlands

The Willamette and its tributaries crested upstream early Monday above flood stage, but, according to army engineers, water contained in the new Cottage Grove and Dorena dams kept the river two feet below the level it would have reached.

The flood crest at Eugene without the dams would have been 15.8 feet instead of 13.9. The engineers added that the Lookout Point dam, now under construction, would have kept the crest to 9.5 feet.

In the Glenwood area between Eugene and Springfield, where evacuations were made Sunday, things were reported "back to normal" by Walter Steen, Red Cross disaster chairman in the area.

"We had the health inspectors here by 8:30 this morning and were moving trailers back by 9," Steen said. He reported that very little damage had been done in the area.

Most of the roads closed Sunday afternoon are now open. Highways 99S, 58 and 97 are open as is highway 36 to the coast. Highway 99E is open going north while state highway 38 is closed by slides from Drain to Reedsport.

On the Oregon coast, highway 101 is open to Coos Bay, but closed just south of Coquille. The coast highway is also closed north of Depoe Bay. All roads in the immediate vicinity of Eugene were reported open at 5 p.m. Monday.

"A Date With Dad," submitted by Marilyn Patterson, junior in speech, will be the theme for the weekend. The theme will be carried out in the sign contest and decorations, Gamiles said. Miss Patterson is also writing the letter to dad which will be published in the Emerald later in the week.

Erich Mendelsohn, Architect, To Speak On Oregon Campus

An internationally known architect, a pioneer in contemporary style, will be the guest of the art and architecture school next week on campus.

He is Erich Mendelsohn, who is being brought to the school as part of its policy to bring outstanding people in architecture to the campus for lectures and criticism. Mendelsohn will arrive Thurs., Jan. 29, and remain for the rest of the week.

The architect will speak on "My Contribution to Contemporary Architecture" Friday evening, Jan. 30, at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of the science building.

The Einstein Tower, designed by Mendelsohn, brought him international fame in 1921. Previous to this time he had made a series of sketches which were widely admired. Receiving his degree in architecture in 1912, Mendelsohn designed new stores for the Schocken department store chain, which are considered to be among his best work for that period.

In the early '30's, he went to England and, in conjunction with Serge Chermayeff, he designed the DeLaWarr Pavilion at Bexhill.

Mendelsohn came to the United States in 1941 and settled in San Francisco. He has designed works in St. Louis, Cleveland and San Francisco since that time. Mendelsohn is also the author of a number of books and articles on modern architecture.

STUDENTS TOO BUSY?

Two Dances Cut By Committee

The Mortar Board Ball and the Military Ball were abolished by the student affairs committee Monday. The two major dances will be eliminated beginning with the academic year 1953-54.

The decision was made after a student sub-committee recommended a decrease of the number of student activities because they acted as a "drag on a student's time and energy."

A sub-committee recommendation that all class dances, with the exception of the Junior Prom, be eliminated in favor of a single dance put on by the combined classes was referred back to the sub-committee for further study.

Marian Briner, president of Mortar Board, senior women's honorary, said Monday night that a Mortar Board Ball is planned for this year. Concerning elimination of next year's ball, Miss Briner said:

Look First

"We had hoped that we might look at the success of this year's ball before deciding. We wanted to let next year's group decide for themselves."

Alan Babb, president of Scabbard and Blade, military honorary and sponsor of the Military Ball, said Monday:

"Because of the lack of funds this year I really had no argument." Babb said that the military honorary still desired to retain the privilege of holding the dance.

Tom Wrightson, senior class president, and Bob Summers, junior class president, expressed opposition to an all-class dance at the student affairs committee meeting.

Elimination of the Mortar Board Ball and the Military Ball leaves the number of major all-campus dances at 4.

Split-ballot Talk Continues Today

The faculty-student constitutional committee, meeting Monday to consider the constitutionality of the freshman "split ballot" measures, adjourned until 3 p.m. today without making a decision.

According to E. S. Wengert, head of the political science department and newly appointed committee member, main reason for postponement of a decision was the absence of one of the committee's student members.

He said he expected a decision would be reached today.

The committee is considering the ballot measure at the request of the ASUO senate, which passed the ruling Nov. 6.

At that time Mrs. Helen Jackson Frye, ASUO vice-president and head of the freshman election committee, objected to the split arrangement, whereby the ballot is divided into two sections, one for candidates for president (with the runner up to be vice-president) and one for class representatives.

The minutes of the Nov. 6 senate meeting state that she "pointed out that the constitution stated the candidate with the highest number of votes will be president and the candidate with the second highest number vice president." In her opinion if the ballot were divided "we would be electing two presidents and two vice presidents."

Appeal of Deportation Set for UO Chinese Prof

The appeal of Shu-Ching Lee, associate professor of sociology, will be given a hearing before the Board of Immigration Appeals Jan. 28.

Lee, whose request for suspension of deportation was refused by Congress, will be represented at the hearing in Washington D.C. by J. H. Krug, former secretary of the interior, who is now practicing law.

"There is not a serious likelihood of immediate deportation, however, even if all appeals fail," Joel V. Berreman, professor of sociology reported, adding that it is not the policy of this country to deport a person to a country that the U.S. does not recognize.

If all appeals should fail Lee would not be deported until such time as the U.S. recognizes the new regime in China, or until another regime is in power. "But this leaves Dr. Lee in a state of some uncertainty," Berreman said.

There is also a long-range possibility, Berreman said, in a bill that is now being considered to give political asylum to citizens of unfriendly countries. This, however, would involve quite a length of time and would be uncertain.

"The Portland office has reassured us," he added, "that the immigration service does not deport Chinese citizens to Formosa."
