

What Do You Think of . . .

. . . Student Government

Ron Stanger, freshman in pre-law from Grants Pass, said: "First of all, it's kind of impersonal . . . certain guys are going to win elections and there's not much you can do about it. They carry the party to extremes here . . . the strongest party puts up somebody an dhe's sure to win. "I think that's more true than in high school. The party system is good, but they carry it to an extreme at Oregon."

Member Tells Election Plans Of Frosh Council

By Paul Keefe
Emerald Assistant Managing Editor

The freshman election council, as termed by John Feliz, freshman in liberal arts and spokesman for the group, will only exist "until after the election" and will then go out of existence.

The group, which was formed to "pick a representative slate of officers" to run in the Jan. 28 freshman elections, chose their slate Tuesday evening after screening 11 prospects for the positions.

The "council" is a self-appointed group which claims members from most freshman living units. The group, according to Feliz, was started in the co-ops, where it is the strongest, but now has members from men and women's dorms and off-campus students.

Representatives of the "council" are not elected or appointed. The group accepts any interested parties.

Phyllis Pearson, president of Carson 5, told the Emerald Wednesday evening, that she withdrew from the group after attending some of the meetings because the whole thing was "awfully confused and not very organized". She said that the council seemed illegal since political parties were to stay out of the election.

The Emerald learned Wednesday that the council divided the freshman living units—Vet's dorms, co-ops, Carson hall and Hendricks—and each was to receive one candidate. The slate they selected was divided in this manner.

If the slate is elected next Friday, they will have no obligations to the "council", Feliz said. But other members of the group said that it would serve as an advisor to the officers in matters which concerned the freshmen.

Helen Jackson Frye, ASUO vice-president, has stated that the council could give its backing to any candidate and it would be "all right". Pat Dignan, ASUO presi-

Freshmen Candidates Speak Tonight At SU

Candidates for freshman class office will have a chance to "speak their piece" at the introduction assembly tonight in the Student Union.

The assembly will open at 7 p.m. in the SU ballroom.

Twenty freshmen submitted petitions to make their candidacy official. Mrs. Helen Jackson Frye, ASUO vice president and election committee chairman, considered that number "an excellent response."

Breaking with tradition, Mrs. Frye will introduce each candidate herself tonight. In past years, the practice has been for each

Mrs. Frye altered this method because, she explained, the practice had degenerated into a "popu-

OLA Schedules '53 Scholarship In Library Work

The Oregon Library association has announced its annual offer of a $150 scholarship to assist an Oregon resident in obtaining a Master of Librarianship degree at the University of Washington school of librarianship.

Candidates must be residents of Oregon and should expect to return to Oregon for at least one year of professional work following graduation from the school of librarianship. They must hold the bachelor's degree from an accredited college or university and meet the standards of University of Washington school of librarianship. Candidates will be chosen on the basis of personal qualifications for library service, academic record and need.

Tryouts Continue For UT Production

Tryouts will continue today at 7 p.m. in Villard 102 for the University theater production, "She Stoops to Conquer." Several parts are still open, especially for men, according to theater officials.

Tryouts for the production to be presented in the Arena theater Feb. 27 and 28 and March 2-7 and 9-12 are open to any student.

larity contest to see who could get the best known nominator.

Freshman girls will be allowed to leave their dormitories to attend, she added.

Candidates will be called in alphabetical order and each will be allotted four minutes' speaking time.

Campaign rules, which have been printed and are available to each candidate, include:

1. Ten dollar maximum on campaign expenses. Each candidate must turn in an account of expenditures and receipts (if any) by 6 p.m. Wednesday at the ASUO office.

2. Restrictions on campaign literature. Campaign literature cannot be nailed or tacked to campus trees (some form of adhesive tape is permissible, however), cannot be distributed in the SU or on its grounds and must be cleaned up by the candidate after the election.

3. No campaigning on election day (Wednesday).

Polling booths will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday for voting. These will be located in or near Carson hall, the Veterans dorms, the SU and the Co-op. Only freshmen are eligible to vote and student body cards must be presented in order to obtain a ballot.

Members of the election committee, with the supervision of Director of Student Affairs Donald DuShane, will tally the vote and notify the winners. Committee members include senator-at-large Mike Lally, senior class representative Jane Simpson, junior class vice president, Tom Shepherd and senator-at-large Don Collin.

Split Ballot Reversal Expected By Dignan

ASUO President Pat Dignan said Wednesday that the ASUO senate will probably rescind the split ballot measure tonight.

The student-faculty constitutional committee declared it unconstitutional Tuesday in an "opinion" requested by the senate. It also knocked the practice of designating the office after a candidate's name on the ballot.

"My personal opinion is that we shouldn't go ahead with it," Dignan said. He acknowledged however that there is nothing on the books to force the senate to kill the measure.

Alphabetical Order

If the measure is thrown out, all candidates for freshman class office will probably appear on one ballot in alphabetical order and without any designation as to office.

Dignan expressed displeasure at this probable result, pointing out

Board Picks Executive Under New System

Jim Haycox, senior in journalism, was named editor of the Oregon Daily Emerald Wednesday night. Haycox will take over his new position on Feb. 5.

Haycox was selected by the student publications board over three other applicants—Bill Frye, senior in journalism; Al Karr, junior in journalism; and Bill Gurney, junior in journalism.

Haycox is presently Emerald editorial assistant. He has worked for three years on the paper as a reporter, assistant news editor, make-up editor and photographer.

Under a policy adopted by the publications board last spring, two Emerald editors are selected during the year.

Oregon Coast Awaiting Storm

PORTLAND (AP)—Oregon coastal residents are preparing for another storm heading in from the Pacific Ocean as inland flood waters spread over lowlands in the Willamette valley.

Although the Willamette is falling upstream, the river still is above the flood level at a number of points from Corvallis north. The effect of the flood is still being felt even farther upstream.

In the Eugene area 100 Pope and Talbot woods workers were unable to get to their jobs because of a bridge washout. About 600 workers were laid off by the Hines Lumber company at Oakridge while flood-broken log booms were repaired.

Roads to the outside in the Southwest part of the state are still blocked from the floods and washouts of last weekend's storm. Coast highway traffic will not be restored for 10 days to two weeks.

2000 OSC Seats Available for UO At Waring Show

University of Oregon students will be admitted to a special section in Gill coliseum Feb. 2 at 8 p.m. when Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians appear on the Oregon State campus.

Two thousand folding chair and bleacher seats will be available on the main floor for OSC and Oregon students—the latter being admitted for $1.50 and student body cards. These seats will be held for students until 7:45 and then will be opened to the general public.

This will be Waring's first trip to Oregon and his only other stop in the state will be in Portland. He will bring his entire troupe of 60 entertainers on the nation-wide tour which will perform in 53 cities in 60 days.

UO Coed Receives Birthday Surprise

"And it's my birthday too!" That was the comment of Sally Thurston, who won a door-prize at the Griffis speech in the SU Tuesday night.

Miss Thurston, who was 20, received a P&C tool set of a screw driver, pair of pliers and adjusting wrench.

A second prize was won by Jerry Friedman. His P&C prize was a complete set of screwdrivers.

W. L. Thompson, advertising professor, said other door-prizes would be given at the four remaining advertising speeches.

Schools Set April Dates

Andy Berwick, ASUO intertainment chairman, met with representatives from Oregon State college last week concerning exchange assemblies between the two schools. Oregon's assembly there, it was decided, is to be on April 15, and OSC's will be presented here on April 14.

Arriving too late for Berwick to attend was an invitation to a state-wide convention for the same purpose, held at Salem Jan. 17.

Attending the conference on the Willamette campus were Oregon State, Linfield, University of Portland, Lewis and Clark, OCE, Oregon Technical institute, Southern Oregon College of Education, Willamette and Marylhurst.
