Christian House

"Hobo's Holiday," Christian House's 1953 talent show, will be presented Friday (tonight) at 8 p.m. in the Condon Grade school auditorium, 1737 Agate street. John King is general chairman of the show, sponsored by Christian house to help its students attend national conferences. The program will include weird music, a trip to Hawaii and intriguing costumes. Tickets may be obtained from members of the executive council or any Christian house student for 55 cents.

The "Doughnut Hour" will begin at 9:15 a.m. Sunday, followed by two Bible classes.

Christian house students will participate in Religious Emphasis week by attending the opening session (banquet) Sunday evening at 6 p.m. in the Student Union in place of having their regular fellowship hour.

The executive council will hold a luncheon Thursday noon.

Westminster

Tonight after the University of San Francisco game, a "Nob Hill party" will be the order of the evening at Westminster house. Rev. and Mrs. Thom Hunter will be host the hostess for the evening.

Sunday morning at 9:30 Reverend Hunter will lead a Bible study group. At 11 a.m. a group of Westminster students will conduct the church services at the Springfield Presbyterian church. Any students wishing to go to Springfield should meet at Westminster house by 10:15 Sunday morning.

At 6 p.m. Sunday evening, the group will join with the campus in the opening dinner and program of Religious Evaluation week.

Wednesday at 12:30 p.m. a chapel service will be led by Mary Cochrane in the Westminster chapel. At 5:30 p.m. the citizenship commission will be in charge of the weekly fellowship dinner and program.

Wesley House

Sunday morning at 9:45 the Koinonia Klass at First Methodist church will discuss, "What Methodists Believe—We Believe in the Holy Spirit." The worship service at 11 a.m. will continue the same discussion. Sunday night Wesleyites will cooperate in Religious Evaluation week activities by attending the opening dinner meeting in the Student Union at 6 p.m.

A potluck dinner will be held Tuesday at 5:30. Rabbi Elliot Grafman will be the guest speaker.

On Thursday, a hot noon lunch will be served for thirty cents. A student-led chapel service will immediately follow at 12:30. At 6:30 choir rehearsal will be held.

Next Friday there will be a party immediately following the Oregon-Oregon State game.

Channing Club

At Channing club Friday evening at 8. George McDonough will speak on the topic, "The Intolerance of the Anti-religious." This will be followed by an open discussion, refreshments and a social hour.

Monday and Tuesday evenings, Harry Meserve, one of the main speakers for Religious Evaluation week, and author of "Faith in the Making," will speak at the Unitarian church on topics pertaining to liberal religion.

Meetings of Channing club are held every Friday at 8 p.m. in the Unitarian church on Eleventh and Ferry streets. Paul Civin of the department of mathematics is advisor to the group.

Newman Club

The Newman club is sponsoring a Communion breakfast Sunday after the nine o'clock mass, in the St. Mary's school cafeteria. Father Matthias Burger, Religious Evaluation week speaker, is tentatively slated to speak. Catholic students and faculty are invited to attend.

Brutus Hamilton To Speak Here

Brutus Hamilton, director of athletics at the University of California, will discuss "The Olympic Games," at an assembly scheduled for 1 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Union ballroom. He will be introduced by Leo Harris, director of athletics at the University.

Hamilton was head track and field coach of the American Olympic team which competed in the 15th Olympiad in Helsinki last summer.

He has been active in all but one of the games held every four years since his Missouri undergraduate days in 1920 when he made his Olympic debut as a participant. He placed second to Norway's Lovland in the decathlon competition at Antwerp, Belgium, that year.

Before coming to California in 1932, Hamilton was head coach at Kansas university where he coached one of America's top all-time distance runners, Glenn Cunningham. He has developed many outstanding track stars during his years at California and in 1933 coached the decathlon team of Glenn Morris, Robert Clark and Jack Parker, who took all three places in the toughest event of the Games.

Coast Conference Coffee Hour Topic

Professionalism in the Pacific Coast conference will be the topic of the coffee hour forum panel Tuesday at 4 p.m. in room 213. Panel members are Brutus Hamilton, O. J. Hollis and Dick Strite.

Hamilton, director of athletics and track coach at the University of California, has been appointed head track and field coach for the American Olympic team which competed in Helsinki this summer.

He will speak at an assembly Tuesday at 1 p.m. in the Student Union ballroom.

Hollis, dean of the law school, is a past president of the PCC.

Strite, generally considered dean of the Oregon sports writers outside of the Portland area, has been with the Eugene Register-Guard for 18 years.

Free coffee will be served.

JUST ONE REMAINS

Flops Were Many Among Old Mags

A variety of campus magazines have appeared on the Oregon scene, and have been failures, save one.

There have been tries made at humor magazines, literary magazines, and research supplements, but the only survivor has been the product supported by the alumni—Old Oregon. This is the thirty-third year of publication.

Before its appearance in March, 1919, Old Oregon was preceded by the U of O monthly, Midnight Doughnut, Lemon Punch, Handshake, and Bonvill's Western magazine.

The U of O monthly, in 1902, contained mostly short love stories, and was discontinued after several years, it was said, due to lack of funds.

Along the same lines was the humor magazine, Lemon Punch, started in 1917. It came out irregularly, "from time to time," for six years. The faculty finally put a stop to it in 1923. "The issues," they said, "were getting thin and the humor was getting low."

Handshake was a brainchild of the women's journalism fraternity, Theta Sigma Phi. Perhaps the forerunner of the alumni magazine was Bonvill's Western Magazine, published in Portland by Oregon alums. It thrived for a time, and became recognized on the Pacific Coast, but finally died out due to lack of interest.

Success in the East

Eastern colleges at the time, on the other hand, were having considerable success with magazines devoted entirely to alumni. They proved of great assistance in furthering the growth of the school and uniting alumni. Both Prince Campbell, president of the university and Eric Allen of the journalism school in 1914, were in favor of the proposal for such a magazine at Oregon. The magazine would be published in Eugene or Portland and distributed to all 3,000 alums. Evidently the deal fell through, because the first issue of Old Oregon was not published until five years later in 1919.

There were barely enough funds available to publish the first issues and the life or death of the venture depended solely on alumni support.

And We Quote

Karl Onthank, '13, associate director of student affairs, wrote in the first issue, "The Alumni council is staking all the funds in the Alumni treasury that there will be enough subscriptions to pay for this number and issue others regularly. Frequency and size depend absolutely upon the response which this number meets. "Old Oregon belongs to the Alumni and will succeed or fail just insofar as they support or neglect it."

It began as a small sized quarterly, containing news and opinion of Oregon grads and former students. Two years after its incorporation it took on the appearance of a regular magazine. In 1922 pictures became prominent, and it was published on slick paper.

House Managers Form Corporation

The house managers group has been formally organized as a corporation, the House Managers Co-operative corporation, and has received the legal papers, it was announced last night at the group's meeting.

Freshman pledges for all houses will be charged a minimum of $2.50 per month, the managers decided. Plans for the group co-op and fuel bills were discussed.

Regular meetings of the group will be held every two weeks.

Lowell Shuck will act as the organization's president until spring term elections. Former Pres. Paul Suprenant has resigned.

Talk to Feature Music Modernism

American composer, Wallingford Riegger, will speak on "Some Aspects of 'Modernism' in Music" on Feb. 3 at 1 p.m. in the SU ballroom. The concert lecture has been scheduled in connection with the Contemporary Festival of Arts being held that week.

Campus Briefs

The remaining candidates for King of Hearts who have not been interviewed by the sophomore cabinet of the YWCA are requested to appear for interviews by the cabinet, at noon Monday in Gerlinger hall, according to Norma Hamilton, sophomore cabinet chairman. Miss Hamilton warned that those who do not appear for interviews are automatically eliminated.

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia Initiates New Members

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, men's national music honorary, has initiated seven new members in the Oregon chapter. The new members are Donald Adamson, sophomore in education; Robert Moore, sophomore in music; Howard Southwell, graduate in music; James Baker, junior in music; Don Housch, junior in music; Wayne Mercer, national science honorary.

UO Debate Squad To Go to Tacoma

The University debate squad is preparing for the first action of this term when they travel to the annual Tyro tournament held at the College of Puget Sound in Tacoma, Wash., on Feb. 12 and 13. Their last competitive event was the opening meet at Washington State college in November where the three teams won 11 out of 18 debates.

A schedule for inter-squad debates on the national collegiate question of fair employment practices legislation on the federal level are being drawn up for the next two weeks, Robert Kully, assistant coach, said.

Bruce Holt, freshman in law, and Paul Ward, freshman in political science, on the affirmative side of the question will meet the team of Loretta Mason, freshman in speech, and Elsie Schiller, junior in journalism, on the negative, Saturday morning at 10 in Villard 206. Any interested persons are invited to hear the discussion.

Exams Slated By Ad Group

Oregon chapter of the American Association of Advertising Agencies has announced the date for its seventh annual examination for advertising. It will be held in Portland on Feb. 14 and will be open to students considering advertising as a career.

Testing high-calibre young people for specific kinds of work in the industry, the AAAA chapters throughout the country present the examination which provides a series of aptitude-temperament tests compiled by personnel-testing experts.

According to Mrs. Edna Bloch, chairman of the examination committee, the purpose of the tests is to help the advertising aspirant to compare his abilities with those of 4,500 people who are now employed in advertising. It is hoped that this knowledge will encourage students with promise in the field, and save those with less aptitude from the years of preparation they would undoubtedly spend, she said.

A $20 fee, which will cover part of the cost, will be charged at the time of the examination. Application blanks and additional information can be obtained by writing to Merle Manly, of the Botsford, Constantine and Gardner advertising agency, 115 S.W. 14th Avenue,

Med Tech Course Changed by Profs

Recommended by a group of Oregon State college professors, a plan for a three year pre-technology course followed by a fourth year at medical school will be incorporated in the medical technology curriculum next year.

Attending the meeting at OSC were R. D. Grondahl, assistant professor of clinical pathology, E. S. West, professor of biochemistry and A. L. Soderwall, assistant professor of biology.

Winter Colds Take Toll Of University Students

Students in the infirmary Thursday included Charles Olson, junior in architecture, Sarah Smith, freshman in English, Joan Walker, junior in sociology and Stanley Savage, sophomore in liberal arts.

Also confined were Allen Peters, junior in journalism, Kenneth Sipe, junior in liberal arts, Buddy Smith, sophomore in business, William Curtis, freshman in journalism, Carl Winans, sophomore in liberal arts and Dick DuBossett, sophomore in business.

False Alarm Answered

Three city fire engines answered a false alarm Wednesday night for a reported fire at Campbell Club. The fire department said they did not know who had turned in the alarm but that police are investigating.

IDC To Sponsor Newburn Reception

The inter-dormitory council sponsored reception honoring University President and Mrs. H. K. Newburn will be held Feb. 1, according to Tom Shepherd, IDC president.

Jim Miller, Hale Kane president, is general chairman of the reception.

"The reception is designed to allow independent men the opportunity to meet personally the University president," Shepherd said.

IDC is also planning a dance for Feb. 21, with John Feliz and Mark Newman as general chairmen.
