

FIRST FIFTY YEARS

Modern Art Exhibition Opens Mar. 1

An exhibition of original art by painters and sculptors in the modern epoch will open March 1 in the Gallery of the school of architecture and allied arts.

The show of 30 paintings and eight sculpture pieces will be a feature of the University's Festival of Contemporary Arts program.

The show was obtained in collaboration with the Portland Art Museum. Entries were selected by Thomas Colt, director of the museum, and were selected to represent not only the board experimentation which exemplifies contemporary art, but its international character as well.

First Fifty

Spanning the first fifty years of the twentieth century, the exhibition begins with a canvass by Paul Cezanne, French post impressionist. Works of artists from nine countries will be shown. The Cezanne painting is loaned by the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Matisse's "Joie de Vivre," on loan from the collection of Walter Chrysler, will represent the style of painting known as fauvism. Cubist painters, Pablo Picasso, Georges Braque and Juan Gris, have paintings showing the development of their art from 1907 to 1937.

Dali, Klee, Kandinsky and Mondrian will represent surrealism, Dada, nonobjectivism; Noe, plasticism and other works.

The sculpture pieces range from the Frenchman Rodin to the American designer Calder.

The art works are on loan from a number of museums, galleries and private collections throughout the United States. Among those sending works to the show are New York's Museum of Modern Art, Museum of Non Objective Art, Whitney Museum of Art, San Francisco's Palace of Legion of Honor and the Portland Art Museum.

Artist to Present Music Lecture

Armed with many recordings of his own composition, Wallingford Riegger, American composer, will "spin 'dem black saucers" at his 8:30 browsing room lecture Thursday night.

Riegger's music will include a symphony, string quartet, piano quintet, and brass choir works. "I will also play my other works for various instrumental combinations," he said.

Riegger remarked that he will attempt to show that the idiom in which he is writing is linked with the past. Although he does not consider his compositions particularly dissonant, "they may come somewhat as a shock" to the audience, he stated.

In May of 1948, Riegger became president of the United States section of the International Society for Contemporary Music.

The title of his Thursday night lecture is "Music as Contemporary Art." Arnold Elston, associate professor of music, will be discussion leader for the session.

Art, Ethics, Topic Of Adler Address

Mortimer J. Adler, professor of the philosophy of law at the University of Chicago, will speak at an assembly Tuesday at 1 p.m. He will address his audience on "Art and Ethics" as a part of the program of the Festival of Contemporary Arts, currently being held on campus.

Adler has been identified with the Great Books, a 54 volume set of 443 books, a project conceived by him in collaboration with Chicago university president Robert Hutchins.

IDC Ponders Counseling Change; Dorms Would Elect Own Advisers

A plan to have elected dormitory counselors in John Straub and Susan Campbell halls was discussed Tuesday by the Inter-Dormitory Council.

"Under the plan, hall counselors would be elected by hall members during spring term, from a list of men who would be returning fall term, and who had been approved by the administration," Tom Shepherd, IDC president, said. The plan would not apply to freshmen dorms.

Well Received

A. L. Ellingson, advisor to IDC and counselor for men, said that the plan, on the whole, had been well received by the administration, but that much investigation would have to be made by the dormitory and University affairs committee before the plan could be put into effect.

Oregon State college has elected counselors in the men's dormitories. The plan has been in effect there since World War II.

The council also decided that "Lamplight Lit" will be the theme of the Inter-Dorm council sponsored dance March 7. Newman and Feliz are co-chairmen for the event.
