

University Symposium to Begin Season's Speech Activities Today

The University symposium will begin its speech activities for the season with its first appearance scheduled today, and two additional trips scheduled for next week, Herman Cohen, director, announced. The symposium group annually tours the state, speaking before civic groups, high schools, granges and other organizations.

Three members of the group will present their views on how to combat the Communist menace before a Junction City high school audience this afternoon. Speakers include Phil Cass, freshman in pre-law; Paul Ward, freshman in political science, and Bill Ruiter, senior in liberal arts.

A second engagement is scheduled for Monday evening before the Harrisburg Lions club. Speakers will be Ward, Pat Adkisson, sophomore in English, and Dick Bronaugh, freshman in liberal arts.

The third local appearance will be at Willamette high school Wednesday afternoon. The group will present a discussion on the adoption of fair employment legislation on the federal level. Speakers include Bruce Holt, freshman in pre-law, Cass and Ward.

Goldsmith Play To Open Feb. 26

When Oliver Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," opens in the arena theater Feb. 26, it will mark the second presentation on this campus. On April 11, 1912, the senior class presented the play.

According to the Emerald of that day, "The class showed considerable courage in choosing this fine old classic in preference to the usual lighter play of the 'rah rah' type, but the success they attained more than justifies the venture."

The paper went on to say, "The plot of She Stoops to Conquer and principal characters are fairly familiar to students of most English literature courses."

The play, says Mrs. Otilie T. Seybolt, director of the production, is the first English play since Shakespeare to deal with people in every day life.

It has been done by the Old Vic company in England very recently, Mrs. Seybolt said. The first performance of the comedy was March, 1773.

A partial cast includes Beverly Bruntion, senior in speech, Mrs. Hardcastle; Ethan Newman, UO graduate, Mr. Hardcastle; Joella Wood, freshman in liberal arts, Kate Hardcastle; Karl Harshbarger, junior in speech, Charles Marlow; Scott Lehner, freshman in music, Tony Lumpkin; Susan Perry, junior in foreign languages, Constance Neville; Wade Eaton, freshman in general social sciences, George Hastings, and Tome Gaines, freshman in speech, Sir Charles Marlow.
