Dads Organization Donates Gates, Furniture, Scholarships to U of O

The Dads' Gates, located at the north entrance to the campus, were given both as a gift to the University and as a public service by the University of Oregon Dads' organization.

Built during the depression, the gates were made by Portland Works Project administration workers, with materials being financed by the Dads. The gates were completed in 1935, according to K. W. Onthank, associate director of student affairs, executive secretary of the group.

Organized in 1927, the organization has had 14 presidents, including Arthur Priaux, of Portland, who is the current chief official. University President Bennett Hall, together with a small group of interested dads, organized the group "to serve in every possible way the interests of the sons and daughters of members . . ." according to the original charter.

3,500 Members

Presently composed of approximately 3,500 members, the group has 14 executive board officers throughout the state who meet quarterly to make plans for the group. The only actual meeting of the entire membership is during Dads' Weekend, when there is a general discussion session combined with a business meeting after the luncheon in the Student Union ballroom.

In addition to the Dads' Gates, the club has given other contributions to the University including furniture for the SU Dads' Lounge and other parts of the building.

Scholarships

Principal project currently financed by the group is the Oregon Dads' scholarship, awarded annually to entering freshmen and based upon need and previous scholastic record. The recipients are chosen by the University's scholarship committee.

Other grants are made to upper class students throughout the year. These scholarships are financed by the surplus collected in dues, and an endowment fund is currently being sponsored to provide for future grants.

Beaux-Arts Ball—'Catastrophe' Slated For Friday at Gerlinger

The annual Beaux-Arts ball will explode with the theme "Catastrophe" Friday in Gerlinger annex, Jim Dobson, publicity chairman, has announced. The ball will be a costume affair with "no holds barred" as to apparel.

Dobson said that because of the costumes, students and faculty will lose their identity as such and become a "big, gay family having a gay get-together."

Sponsored by the Associated Students of Architecture and Allied Arts under the chairmanship of Bud Oringdulph, the ball is open to members of ASAAA and their guests.

Ralph Brevic's quartet will supply the music for dancing, lasting from 9 to 12 p.m. Prizes will be given during intermission for the best costumes.

Students will be admitted on their ASAAA membership cards. Those wishing cards can obtain them from Oringdulph or J. Carson Bowler in the east wing drafting room of the art school.

Attorney to Speak On Rosenberg Case

"The Legal Aspects of the Rosenberg Case" will be discussed by Eugene Attorney Charles Porter at a meeting of Young Democrats tonight at 6:30 in the Student Union.

The meeting is open to all interested students and faculty members, according to Charles Grover, president.

Porter, a Harvard graduate, will present a brief talk and then lead a group discussion on the atomic spies whose life or death now rests with Pres. Dwight Eisenhower.

which we can talk with gestures. She included in the "alphabet" movements of flexibility, lightness, speed, sustaining, gliding and directness.

Shadow movements, the dancer told her audience, are the small movements — not always completely subjective. "Nervous tensions are expressed here," she said.

In closing, Miss Meredith-Jones stated, "If we move at all, we reveal ourselves and it is well to remember that."

Dance is the poetry of movement and, while not everyone writes poetry, we must all be concerned with space and form in movement, she said.

We cannot seize experiences from the outside and feel them until they become a part of us. We need to find the relationship of body to space—to "know where you are going and how" the California instructor concluded.

When Grover talks to his dreamboat — something clicks.

A call from Dreamboat always clicks with Grover. And an Automatic Message Accounting machine has been clicking too — down in the telephone office — busily punching impressions on a paper tape.

You may be interested in what this ingenious recorder does. It keeps track of what telephone number you called, how long you talked, and records this information in such a way that another machine can automatically prepare a monthly bill.

The development of this new automatic accounting machine is the result of teamwork by Bell Telephone Laboratories, Western Electric and the telephone companies. Telephone people working on this and other interesting and important projects were in college just a short time ago. Perhaps you'd like to join them.

Your Placement Officer can give you details about employment opportunities in the Bell System. Or write to American Telephone & Telegraph Company, College Relations Section, 195 Broadway, New York 7, N. Y., for a copy of the booklet, "Looking Ahead."
