Oregon Co-eds Adjust To Dorm Life Easily

By Elsie Schiller

Carson Hall, one of the Universities most modern buildings, was dedicated in February 1950. Three-hundred and eighteen women now live there.

Life and living facilities for University co-eds presents no great problems at the present time, either of space or adjustment. Perhaps this can be slyly attributed to women's traditional nest-building instincts which makes a college co-ed feel at home after one week of re-arranging, whether it be in luxurious Carson hall or on the top floor of Gerlinger.

At any rate, the temporary use of Gerlinger and Hendricks annex to house the overflow of women students at the beginning and during last term, brought no complaint from the women involved. The girls at Hendricks annex loved it! And now that they've moved into Carson and Hendricks, well—they like that fine, too.

The use of such facilities next fall depends entirely on the size of women's enrollment. Golda Wickham, director of women's affairs, said. If the enrollment warrants a move, Susan Campbell, the chameleon hall which keeps changing its occupants, and which was originally a women's

Blood Drive Set For Next Month

The winter term blood drive will begin March 10 with the campus Red Cross and the downtown Naval and Marine corp training center. Donna Anderson and Yvonne Holm, campus co-chairmen have announced.

The quota has been set at 300 points of blood; the University will be responsible for at least 150 of the total, according to Commander J. H. Sheppard of the Naval training center.

Person between the ages of 18 and 59, at least 110 pounds in weight and in normally good health are eligible to give blood. Students under 21 must receive the signed consent of a parent or legal guardian on the official form printed in the Emerald or obtainable at local Red Cross offices.

Booths will be set up in the Student Union and Co-op during the next few weeks to schedule appointments for prospective donors, according to the co-chairmen. Transportation to the downtown collection center will be provided by the Navy and Marine training center.

"Giving blood is safe, simple and painless, with every precaution taken for the protection of the donor," Miss Anderson said. "Before the donation, the donor is medically screened by a physician. Professionally registered nurses with special training take the blood, using the most accepted techniques," she said.

Applications for summer employment are now being taken at the Student Employment office. Positions open are for work in a resort hotel and counseling.

The Colorado Resort hotel has work from June 18 to Labor Day, Sept. 7, for women 18 and men 21 and over.

Men over 21 may apply for boys' counseling at a private ranch camp in northern California. The owner will be in Eugene in mid-April for co-eds shows a pretty even score on the distribution of advantages to living in one place or the other. Carson has more luxurious furnishings but the girls at Hendricks have the unified feeling derived from living in less spacious area which promotes that "at home" feeling. There are fewer girls to dorm, can be reconverted to that use. It presently houses some of the overflow of men students. The opening of Carson hall in the fall of 1950 provided sufficient space to alleviate any problem of space.

Housing Breakdown

The present distribution of women students in available housing includes: Hendricks and Carson halls, 425; sororities, 444; the three co-ops, 89; Ann Judson, 36; off-campus, 39; living at home, 160; married, 131; graduates, 53.

a room at Carson, eight double rooms to every single and triple as compared to the four girls to a room at Hendricks. But Hendricks' rooms include a study room, sleeping porch, dressing room and plenty of closet space for those four girls. Carson girls have the disadvantage of trying to get to sleep while the midnight oil still burns for the roommate hitting the books.

Dining Convenience

Additional conveniences of both living organizations include a completely equipped laundry room at Hendricks and one on each floor of Carson and the use of a conveniently located kitchenette service in the house to still those gastric pains when meals seem a million hours apart.

Meals are served cafeteria style except on Sunday when place settings are used. The house mother, seated at head of table, acts as hostess during mealtime. Rumors have it that the Carson dining hall makes a good place to polka in between hours which indicates nothing except that polka fans should apply for rooms there.

Counselor System

Both halls use the counselor system to lessen the responsibility of the individual house mothers and give the girls a shoulder to cry on or a convenient source of advice when the inevitable problems of living away from home arise. Carson has two counselors on each floor and the two at Hendricks give the same proportional distribution according to population.

The problems met by the senior girls acting as counselors in the dormitory cover a wide range from the more serious to the eternal discussions on "boys and what to wear," as one Carson counselor puts it. The counselors check the rooms at closing hours to make sure the girls are all in and check the freshmen during study hours on week nights.

One of the duties of the counselor is helping the arriving freshmen unpack, get orientated and registered all in one hectic week.

The counselors are expected to be aware of the problems of the girls under their supervision and to confer with the housemother on any of the more serious problems that inevitably occur when a hundred girls are living under one roof. And of course that includes the current most prominent problem, unlocking the doors for girls who forget their keys.
