

18th Century Comedy Featured For Browsing Room Assembly

Scenes from "She Stoops to Conquer," which opens tonight at the University theater, were the feature of a browsing room lecture Wednesday.

Robert D. Horn, professor of English, introduced and gave explanatory and background material on the play and the author, Oliver Goldsmith, with comments on the relation of the author's life with scenes from his plays.

Pronouncing "She Stoops to Conquer" "one of the half-dozen choicest comedies in English literature," Horn told the audience that Goldsmith had spent some of his hardest working moments trying to make people laugh through the play. Written at the terminus of his career, "She Stoops to Conquer" was one of Goldsmith's ripest works, according to Horn—being "a compound of his best in both wit and humor."

The first of the scenes presented was that occurring at Mr. Hardcastle's country estate, with the actors involved being George Hastings, Miss Kate Hardcastle, Constance Nevill and Marlow, the hero of the scene. It portrayed the futile attempts at conversation on the part of Marlow with the boring Miss Hardcastle, as he was trying to escape from her to join Miss Nevill, his lover, who was in turn being bored by Hastings.

The other scene was that between Tony Lumpkin and his uncle, in which, according to Horn, "the Georgian side" of the 18th Century was most vividly portrayed. It was in this portion of the play that Goldsmith is said to show best the conflict in all his writings between a satire of "sentimental stuff," as Horn phrases it, and a happy, or serious treatment of the dialogue.

The scenes were presented, in costume, by members of the cast of the University Theater's production of the play which opens tonight.

You Don't Have to be a Beaver to be Eager on

Should virtue be its own reward? Once there was a Junior who was by nature, a Grackler, rather than an Ant. He devoted most of his time and energies to Social Pur-suits, with correspondingly little emphasis on the Curriculum in the Catalogue. Consequently, while he was Right Up There socially, he had academically just about reached the Point of No Return. Topping it off was an Ultimatum from the Male Parent, warning that on his next arrival home, he had better be accompanied either by a List of Passing Grades or a Social Security Card. All Our Boy could see ahead was a lifetime at Hard Labor, unless Something Drastic happened. So he made it happen. Invested heavily in benzedrine and black coffee and lined up three super-skull Tutors. Night and day he Sweated It Out. Made it, too! Wound up, if not with Flying Colors, at least with Respectable Grades. First thing he did, naturally, was to call Western Union and flash the Joyous Tidings homeward by telegram. Then he sat back and waited for the Reaction. It came an hour later. A Telegraphic Money Order for $500, plus a message that read: "Delighted at your confounding the Prophets, including myself. Hope you will join me on two-month European trip, expenses paid, starting June 20th." Signed, POP. Moral? When you've got good news to impart, strike while the Item is Hot by Telegram! It adds weight, as well as wings, to Your Words. In any kind of Communication, from Date Talk to Dream Talk to Job Talk, you'll get farther, faster, when you use the Yellow Blank. Just call Western Union.
