Oregon Debaters Win Top Honors In Western Meet

Pre-Law Men Shine In Final Tournament

The University debate squad won first place at the 29th annual Pacific Forensic league tournament held at the University of Southern California during spring vacation. Garnering the third regional championship for this season, the squad's California victory completed one of the most successful debating seasons in University history, according to Herman Cohen, director of forensics.

Phil Cass, freshman in pre-law, and Don Mickelwait, sophomore in pre-law, defeated teams from Stanford, Southern California, University of Nevada, University of Arizona and University of California to win the debate championship of the Pacific coast states. There were no divisions in any competition, and the University junior men's team met both junior and varsity teams in all divisions of speaking competition.

Paul Ward, freshman in political science, made the finals in extemporaneous speaking and placed fourth in tournament rating. Mickelwaite and Ward participated in discussion which did not receive ratings.

Ward also rated high in after dinner speaking and Cass made a good showing in oratory, Cohen said.

Entries in the tournament are limited to one participant for each event and one debate team from schools who are members of the league.

Mickelwait and Cass also hold the Northwest regional title in junior men's debate won at the College of Puget Sound earlier in the season. The second men's debate team of Ward and Bruce Holt, freshman in pre-law, also won first title in Far West competition in junior men's debate at Linfield college.

The University squad completed the competitive season with a record of 65 per cent wins in the five debate tournaments attended during the year.

Cohen accompanied the participants on the trip to Los Angeles.

Other first place winners included Stanford in extempore, Oregon State in oratory and the University of Southern California in after dinner speaking.

AWS President At Ohio Session

The Intercollegiate AWS convention in Columbus, Ohio, is the destination of new AWS President Judy McLoughlin, junior in English, who left Eugene Monday.

Representing Oregon at the convention, Miss McLoughlin will join nearly 1000 other AWS delegates from colleges and universities all over the country. The delegates will discuss AWS projects and plans in workshop groups.

Miss McLoughlin will return from the convention the end of next week. Mrs. Golda Wickham, dean of women's affairs, who usually accompanies the UO delegation, will not attend the meet this year.

Three Officers' Jobs In Doubt

Three class officers apparently failed to make a 2-point GPA winter term and may be disqualified for the positions they hold on the ASUO senate.

The officers involved are Bob Brittain, junior class president; Janet Miller, sophomore class representative, and Meb Buchanan, freshman class vice-president. In two cases, the individuals, when contacted by the Emerald, pointed to the possibility of errors in grading and said they were personally checking with their instructors.

According to the ASUO constitution, "No student shall take office nor continue to hold office under this constitution unless he shall have complied with the academic requirements of the University of Oregon." This means that the officers must automatically resign their positions if the office of student affairs declares them ineligible. Action on the matter will not take place until later in the week.

If the three are disqualified, the ASUO senate will be obliged to elect new class officers to fill the vacancies at its meeting next week, Pat Dignan, ASUO president, said Monday. Under provisions of the constitution, "It shall be the duty of the Senate to maintain its membership and therefore it shall elect students to fill the class offices and ASUO representative vacancies."

Dorm Council to Meet

A meeting of the Inter-dorm council will be held today at noon in John Straub, according to Tom Shepherd, president.

Topics of discussion for the meeting will be finances, the trip to Oregon State college last term and the recent IDC dance, Shepherd said.

MEET THE DEANS

Sabine on Tour of Schools

Dean Gordon A. Sabine of the University of Oregon's school of journalism left March 20 for a nine-week study tour that will take him to six universities of the nation. He will be on a Carnegie

"young administrator" fellowship to study institutional administrative patterns.

Dr. Sabine will return at the end of May. He will spend three weeks each at the University of Wisconsin and at Princeton university, a week at Brown university, and a week at Stanford university. He will also study administration at Northwestern university and at the University of Minnesota.

The Oregon journalism dean has headed the school since 1950. He is one of the youngest administrative men in the profession.

"My two favorite activities are with two families—my family at home and the journalism family here at the University," said Sabine, when asked about his chief interests.

Sabine became a father for the third time just about one month ago. His two older children are aged three and nine. The other family, the University of Oregon school of journalism, includes some 41 juniors and seniors in the professional school.

Sabine's career includes a wide background in the newspaper business. Among the positions he has held are copy editor of "The Wisconsin State Journal" in Madison; editor of "Wisconsin Wildlife," and correspondent for "Christian Science Monitor," "Chicago Sun" and "Milwaukee Journal."

In addition to his professional career, Sabine has been active in the field of education. He was a graduate assistant in journalism at Wisconsin from 1939 to 1941, but did not take up full time teaching until 1945. He taught at the Universities of Kansas, Wisconsin and Minnesota before coming here in 1948.

In the fall of 1951, the dean was a professor in residence with Time, Inc., in New York city observing and studying the publishing firm's organization. It was during this period that Sabine met Henry R. Luce, whom he persuaded to visit and lecture on the campus last month.
