

Education Professor Scores First With Social Behavior Exams

A first in a field child psychology formerly considered intangible has been scored by Hugh Wood, professor of education. He is the originator of a series of six tests designed to measure the social behavior of children.

The tests culminate 15 years of research with more than 8000 students and are based on a number of real-life situations or problems reported to Wood by children. The tests were developed to tap the knowledge of children in grades 4 through 12 in respect to such social characteristics as integrity, leadership, cooperation, critical thinking and friendliness, Wood said.

Wood stressed that the tests "are only a beginning. They measure only what a child knows and not necessarily what he does." He explains further that "the primary value of these instruments is in the motivation of young people to think about these democratic values, to discuss them with their teachers and fellow students, and then to be guided by them in their behavior. They provide a constructive implement for character education."

Wood first presented the tests at a national meeting of curriculum leaders in Cleveland, Ohio, and later at a similar gathering in Los Angeles, Calif. Articles describing the tests will appear this month in two education journals.

Mickey Hurls No-Hitter

A no-hitter, hurled by Beta Theta Pi's Harlan Mickey, topped the Monday afternoon intramural softball slate. Mickey whiffed 10 and walked 6 in recording the 5-1 victory. Leading the offense for the Betas were Mickey and Ed Meyers with two singles each, and Rodgers Dockstader and Richard Fettig, each with a home run. The slugging Betas produced nine hits in battering the Phi Sigs, who began the game with only four men on the field.

IM Umps Needed

Any student interested in making $2.00 an afternoon umpiring intramural softball games should either call or visit Gene Evonuk, assistant IM director, as soon as possible.

DU's Win Slugfest

Delta Upsilon emerged victorious in a slugfest with Phi Kappa Psi in a Monday intramural softball game. Although they actually outhit the DUs 10 to 11, the Phi Psis failed to hit in the clutches and were on the short end of the 11 to 8 score.

Leading the barrage for the DUs were John Wadman, with a single and double to his credit, and Bill Nerval with two doubles. The hitting stars for the Phi Psis were Wayne Ballantyne with a single and homer, and Doug White, with a double and homer.

Tennis, Golf Postponed

Because of inclement weather, Monday's scheduled intramural golf and tennis action was postponed and will be made up today.

Former Prof Slates Talk on Writers

W. F. G. Thacher, professor emeritus of English, will return to the campus Wednesday evening to talk about some of his former students in a lecture entitled "Some Oregon Authors I Have Known," scheduled for 7:30 in the Student Union browsing room.

Thacher will sketch the careers of Edison Marshall, Robert Ormand Case, Ernest Haycox, Nancy Wilson Ross, Kressman Taylor, and others who were students in his creative writing classes and later became well known in the literary world.

He will recall the days of early journalism at the University and the 1920 period in which the writing was done, stressing the recent books and literary standing of these Oregon authors.

William Tugman, editor of the Eugene Register-Guard, will lead discussion following the talk.

NW Airport Meet Slated for Campus

Public airport officials and private operators from Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana will attend the first Northwest Airport Management conference to be held April 20-22 at the University.

Representatives from neighbor areas and British Columbia have been invited to attend the discussion of mutual management problems.

Featured as speakers are Governor Paul Patterson, Joseph A. Adams, members of the Civil Aeronautics board, Washington, D. C.; Joseph K. McLaughlin, director of Aeronautics of California.

Community, Opportunity in Airport Development, Airport Financing, Aviation Trends as Related to Airport Planning and Agricultural Development of Airports are included in the discussion topics.

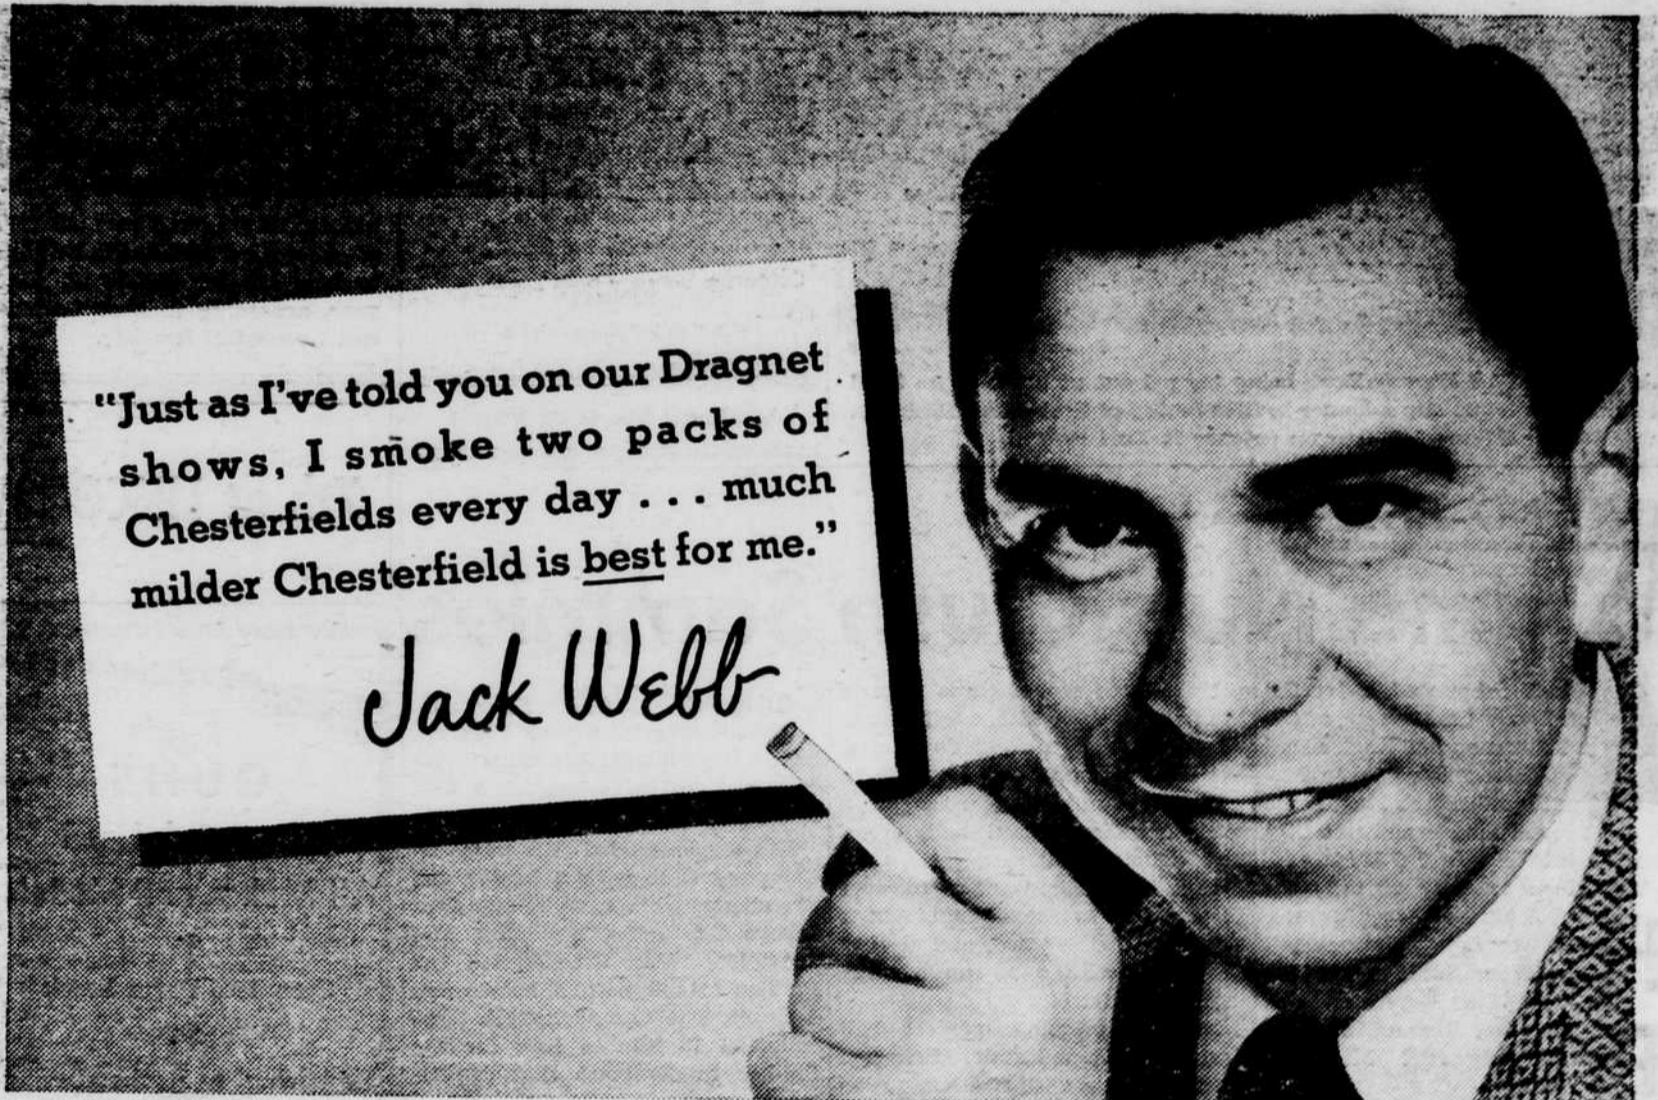

Northwest aeronautic commissions and the Oregon League of Cities are sponsors of the conference.

Pi Kappa Phi to Hold Conferences on Campus

Pi Kappa Phi fraternity will hold a district conference and leadership school on the campus Saturday and Sunday according to Dwayne R. Stoddard, president of the Oregon chapter.

J. Al Head, Pi Kappa Phi northwest district president, will direct the conference. Head is a resident of Salem.

Representatives from Oregon, Oregon State college, and the universities of Washington, California and Arizona will take part in the business discussions and social events of the conference.
