Profit in Giving

If looks were the only criterion, Waldo would win the current campus beauty contest hands down.

The very fact that he is entered, along with the coin count contests, car wash, and auction, add a touch of whimsy to the WSSF drive that merits applause.

Even without the fun, however, the drive would be worthwhile.

Funds collected here will go to Greece, Syria, India, Burma, Pakistan, Japan, Indonesia and Korea. They will buy textbooks, supply tuition, pay for laboratory equipment, hospital and surgical equipment, CARE packages, and hostel accommodations.

Students at Oregon complain about living in dorms, while students in Pakistan put up their own bamboo huts on any available piece of ground, and stay there until they are forced to move away, which is often.

Here complaints about the food are standard topics of conversation. In other parts of the world, students are searching for education while fighting off TB, malaria, and dysentery caused by famine.

If this sounds like a sob story, it should be remembered that the WSSF drive is more than a plea for the underprivileged. There is a profit for the giver, too, although it depends on a rather idealistic assumption.

As the Christian Science Monitor puts it, the drive should enlist the support of all those who hold that education is the most potent weapon in the armory of freedom.

Deady Hall Lives Anew After Plastic Surgery

Ivy-covered Deady hall, oldest building on campus, has undergone extensive interior plastic surgery since September. It now houses the math department.

New features include soundproof acoustic tile floors, an automatic steam-heating system, new wiring and diffused fluorescent lighting.

The rooms have been redone in soft yellow and green color scheme. Most still retain their 20-foot-high ceilings, except on the third floor where ceilings have been lowered to the level of the old window frames.

New waterproof shingles were put on the roof of the hall.

Ground for Deady was broken in 1873. The building was complete except for a roof, by 1876. Townspeople produced the needed sum through donations. School children contributed money for the glass in the window frames that still remain as a monument.

KWAX To Feature Geodesic Interview

Prof. George Geodesic, inventor and architect, will be interviewed tonight at 6:15 on KWAX, according to Announcer Thorne Briar. The interview is one in the KWAX "Lemon Punch" series which lampoons various aspects of campus activity.

Professor Geodesic is the designer of the invisible dome built on the top of Carson hall. Geodesic's geodesic dome is not to be confused with the dome recently built by the architecture school, said Briar.

Summers Tells Preview Shift

The biggest change in this year's schedule of events for Duck Preview is the change from an all-campus luncheon on Saturday to lunch in campus living organizations, according to Sunny Allen and Bob Summers, general co-chairmen.

Highlights of Saturday will be a watershow performed by the Amphibians, women's swimming honorary, the Washington-Oregon baseball game, and a "snack time" for senior girls sponsored by the Eugene City Panhellenic.

Final event of the weekend will be the "Duck Preview" dance in the SU ballroom.

Annual French Play Rehearsals Begin

Rehearsals have begun on the annual French play sponsored jointly by Pi Delta Phi, French honorary, and the department of foreign languages.

This year's play, "La Sauvage" by Anouith, is under the direction of J. E. Guedenet, assistant professor of Romance languages.
