Good Move

It's nice to see IFC "on the ball." A lot of people, us included, were pretty disappointed with what appeared to have happened at last week's meeting when, so it seemed, that group was beating its head against the same old stone wall.

We're still not quite sure what happened. Is this support of deferred living a real "turn around" in their policy? Or is it possible that last week's meeting, as many members indicate, was so confused that nobody knew just exactly what was coming off? It would be easy to think the latter. Con Sheffer, the very able new prexy, took over at that meeting with no background whatsoever. He told us he wasn't sure just exactly what the group had done with that piece of junk called "Spotlight on the Report of the Alumni Committee to Study Deferred Living."

One of the members of the committee appointed by IFC to look into the matter of deferred living said that when the report came up he just kept his mouth shut. He didn't know if that committee had done anything—thought maybe the group had met without him and had drawn this thing up.

But they hadn't. The report, a slick piece of work but very misleading — in some cases downright false — was the job of one person and didn't express the council's feelings.

But one thing is sure. The fraternities and the school both have suffered by this episode. Some members mentioned phone calls from out-of-town alums who wondered just what was going on. Very regrettable — but that's just exactly what happens when people leap before they look.

Obviously if fraternities had their way, deferred living would go out the window. But they don't (thank God). And they know this. The general feelink expressed was to the effect that while the University has a definite interest in keeping the fraternity system intact, if it came to a showdown . . . well . . . we'd still have deferred living.

But it certainly doesn't have to come to that. And there's very little chance that it ever will now that they've decided to work with, instead of against, the administration. As Ron Lowell put it, the administration can't be threatened into anything. But it will be only too glad to cooperate just as soon as the fraternity system quits hollering about injustice.

● Campus Briefs

● Three Junior Weekend meetings are scheduled for today in the Student Union. Representatives of all living organizations are to meet at 4 p.m. to draw for pairings for the all-campus clean-up. The committees for the Junior Prom and the float parade will also meet at 4 p.m.

● A coffee hour will be held today at 4 p.m. in the Dad's lounge for Walter Van Tilburg Clark, visiting novelist and short story writer. Clark's presence this week at the University of Oregon is sponsored by the English department. He is on current tour of colleges on the Pacific Coast featuring creative writing.

● Chi Delta Phi, women's honorary, will meet at 5 p.m. today in the Student Union following the Clark coffee hour, according to Marilyn Patterson, president.

● Inter-dormitory council will meet at noon today in John Straub hall, Tom Shepherd, president, announced.

● J. S. Carlson, director of admissions and counseling, has been selected to serve as co-chairman of the program committee for the annual Northwest Council of Personnel and Guidance associations, which will meet in Portland October 16 and 17.

● Women who are interested in going through spring term open rush should contact the office of Mrs. Golda Parker Wickham, associate director of student affairs, as soon as possible. No formal rush period is planned.

● The regular entrance test battery will be given to Eugene area high school seniors beginning Tuesday, according to J. S. Carlson, director of admissions and counseling. The examinations are given early to aid in the high school guidance programs.

● Pauline Merrill, freshman in liberal arts, was pledged Wednesday by Sigma Kappa, according to the office of Mrs. Golda Parker Wickham, associate director of student affairs.

Oregon Answers Call for Flood Relief

The people of Oregon contributed $214.50 for flood relief on the island of Thoen, Holland, according to a letter just received from Wim van Eekeren.

Van Eekeren, who received his masters degree in journalism here last year, wrote to Gordon Sabine, dean of the journalism school, asking for aid for his homeland early in February when the dikes broke in Holland during one of the worst floods in Europe's history.

In his letter, Van Eekeren said "mere words cannot express our gratitude for the response we received to our appeal to you for a 'simple dollar'."

A total of $299 was received by the people of the island. Eugene contributed $178 and the town of Lakeview donated $33. The rest of the money came from California and the east coast, Van Eekeren said.

'Y' Politics Confab Postponement Told

The discussion on campus politics originally scheduled by the YMCA for noon today has been postponed until political issues become more clear cut, according to Russ Walker, YM executive secretary.

Groups Auctioned To Highest Bidders Friday for WSSF

First of the events planned for Duck Preview and one of the last for the World Student Service Fund will be the WSSF auction at 4 p.m. Friday on the Student Union terrace, reports Dick Gray, publicity chairman.

Campus groups, ranging from beauty queens to the ugly man contest finalists, from instructors to student affairs officials, and from Kwama to Skull and Daggers, will go to the highest bidder under the gavel of Spencer Snow, auctioneer.

The groups are to serve dinner and provide entertainment for the group which purchases them, according to Don Gartrell, auction chairman.

Pollack Announces Skit Meeting Today

The Junior Weekend parade interim skit committee will meet at 4:30 p.m. today in the Student Union, Bob Pollack, chairman, has announced.

Each living organization planning to have a skit as part of the float parade should have a representative at the meeting. The skits, such as bicycle routines and clowns, will be alternated between the floats in the parade, Pollack said.
