

MORE THAN GOONS

Frosh Ready for War

"I'll lead my men into the field personally," said Bob McCracken, freshman class president, about Friday's freshman-sophomore tug-o-war.

"I hear that the sophomores are importing a goon squad of muscle men from an institution to the north," McCracken said when interviewed Wednesday evening at his training camp at Perkin's Point,

"but they'll need more than that." McCracken, with a confident tone of victory, remarked that regardless of how much outside help the sophomores get, the freshmen can adequately handle them.

"I'm unable to reveal any of our strategy but I can say that we are prepared for quite a pull," McCracken stated as he turned back to his map of the contest site.

Political Posters Not for SU Area

Political posters are not permitted on the square block occupied by the Student Union, SU director Dick Williams reminded a meeting of the SU Board Wednesday night. He told the board that several such posters have been torn down and any others found on that block will receive the same treatment.

Williams also pointed out that political posters are not allowed on trees or campus buildings by university rule.

Baldwin Featured In YMCA Talks

"Its Evolution Compatible with Creation?" will be discussed by E. M. Baldwin, associate professor of geology and curator of the museum of natural history, tonight at 7:30.

His talk, sponsored by the YMCA, will be held in the Student Union. It is one of a series on "questions of religion" currently being sponsored by the YM. The discussion is open to all students, according to Russ Walker, executive secretary of the YM.
