It's Little They Ask

On any number of occasions throughout this past school year, the editors of the Emerald have been approached by students with ideas and material for "a good editorial."

In most cases, the "good idea" turns out to be somebody's promotion — the request being for the Emerald to support the cause editorially. That's not always the case, however. Sometimes someone comes to the "shack" angry or bitter about something, wanting the editorial page to help carry the torch.

Usually, we don't cooperate. But by refusing to go along we have never meant to imply that a cause was unworthy.

As far as that goes, we'd guess that any number of news stories this year have accomplished far more, just by telling the facts, than we could by suggesting, threatening or imploring. Far from being omnipotent, the editorial is just another piece of news to the reader, one with a point of view. And we have ample indication that the Emerald cannot move mountains by demanding that they get out of the way.

Having of late, however, been unusually uncooperative in this respect, we would like to make a short observation about the current YMCA-YWCA clothing drive.

This group, which we look on as one of the really hard-working organizations on campus, is not asking for money — just clothes (preferably woolen) that you no longer have any use for. That seems like a reasonable request, when one realizes that in many parts of the world our castoff garments would be, literally, a king's garb.

We are a very lucky bunch of people, we Americans, living better than any other nationality on the face of this earth. Perhaps we have a right to get irritated occasionally when it seems like we're loaning or giving money out faster than we're making it. But when it comes to old clothes, it's a different story.

You would probably give anything you could to the destitute who came to your door. Why not be just as generous to the millions of poor and ill-kept just beyond the front gate?

Here for an Education

Instructions Given For Commencement

All degree candidates listed on the commencement program may participate in the commencement exercises June 14, according to Clifford L. Constance, registrar. Blank diploma cases will be presented on the platform, with the individual diplomas issued later to those who have completed all requirements.

The procession will start forming at 1:45 p.m. All processions will march from the assembling points to McArthur court by 2:30 p.m. in the following order: faculty members, advanced degree candidates, baccalaureate degree candidates in liberal arts and the professional schools of architecture and allied arts, business administration, education, health and physical education, journalism, law, medicine and music.

Degrees will be conferred by the deans of the schools or their representatives, after which they will receive their diplomas.

Caps and gowns must be worn for the exercises, emphasizes Constance. No corsages will be allowed. Masters candidates will wear their hoods in the procession. Doctors candidates will receive theirs on the platform. Constance has announced that the doctor's hoods must be delivered to his office no later than the day preceding commencement.

Announcements of the regulations have been prepared for all degree candidates, reports Constance.

Campus Briefs

News for the Campus Merry-Go-Round must be turned in to the Emerald shack by 4 p.m. today, according to Gail Savage, Emerald living organization editor.

A meeting of the House Managers association will be held tonight at 6:30 in the Student Union.

The YWCA service commission will meet at noon Thursday to plan next year's program. Herbert Bisno will speak on "Lane County Community Council and Service to the Community." Anyone interested in working on the service commission next fall is invited to attend. Those attending have been asked to bring sack lunches.

Inter-denominational chapel group will meet at noon Thursday in the YMCA office. Interested persons have been invited.

Inter-Fraternity Council will meet tonight at 6:30 p.m. for final consideration and action on the proposed fall term rush rules. The meeting will be held in the Student Union and all members are urged to attend, according to Con Sheffer, president.

to world peace is of concern to the UN."

Any object to the white man fighting aggression in Asia, Pearson labeled as "race discrimination in the other direction." Racial discrimination in any form, in or outside of the British Commonwealth, is outdated, he added.

"I don't think Nehru really believes that Communism is not a threat to India," Pearson said. "Nehru is acutely conscious of the threat and hasn't hesitated at vigorous action—there are more Communists behind bars in India than in the United States."

AWS Awards 9 Scholarships

Nine Oregon women were awarded scholarships by campus women's groups at a recognition tea sponsored by the Associated Women Students and held Tuesday evening in Gerlinger hall.

Winners of the annual AWS scholarships were: Helen May, junior in architecture; Pat Beard, sophomore in liberal arts, and Marian Winters, freshman in foreign languages.

Phi Theta Upsilon, junior women's service honorary, awarded scholarships to the following women: Carol Wood, sophomore in liberal arts; Judy Harris, sophomore in education, and Alice Komatsu, freshman in liberal arts. Kwanta, sophomore women's service honorary, presented scholarship awards to Prudence Dicz, freshman in liberal arts; Elizabeth McIlveen, freshman in English, and Mary Sweeney, freshman in music.

Don Lewis Chosen Least Man at Ball

Don Lewis, freshman in liberal arts was selected as the least of them all, the Least Man on Campus at the Mortar Board Ball Saturday night. Lewis was supported in the contest by Hendricks hall, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, and Stitzer hall.

Winners of the Traffic Court scholarships, presented by Fred Turner, were Genevieve Eachus, freshman in liberal arts, and Dennis Olson, freshman in architecture and allied arts.

Sigma Chi won the award, presented for the first time, for the largest percentage of members in attendance at the dance.

An outsized box of bubblegum went to Jim Livesay, senior in physical education, as the winner of the corsage contest. Creator of the corsage, Janet Woods, freshman in journalism, received a box of suckers.

IIE Debate Finalist Chosen from Here

Karl Harshbarger, junior in speech, has been notified by the Institute of International Education and the Committee on International Discussion and Debate of Unesco that he is one of the finalists for the International Debate Tours.

The finals will be held in Chicago, Ill., July 10 and 11. From the winners one team will be sent to India, another to England.

The two British debaters who appeared on campus earlier in the term were sponsored by this organization. Harshbarger and Don Collin, senior in economics, represented the University in a debate with them at that time.

BA Majors Guests In Coos Bay Area

Three University business administration majors were visitors in the Coos Bay area last week as guests of the Coos Bay Lumber Co.

Making the trip were Stanley Goodell and Jack Adair, both seniors, and A. L. Stanley, junior in business. While in the area the trio observed logging, transportation and milling processes of the company's plants in Coquille, Coos Bay and Powers.

The visit was made possible by E. S. Goodell, vice president of Dant and Russell, Inc., who spoke at the lumber session of the ninth annual student business conference held on campus in April.

Veterinary School Open to Oregonians

Prospective veterinary students whose residence is in Oregon may apply for admission to the Colorado A and M. School of Veterinary Medicine through the Western Regional Commission for Higher Education, according to Chancellor Charles D. Byrne.

Arrangements have been completed to admit six Oregon students in Colorado A and M each year during the next two years, said Byrne, chancellor of the Oregon State System of Higher Education and member of the Western Regional Commission. The state of Oregon will pay $1200 for each space and the individual student will pay the in-state fee.

The program is one enacted by the '53 Legislature for highly specialized subject matter fields where it is more economical to send students across state boundaries than to set up expensive schools in each state. Oregon will receive students in medicine and dentistry.

For applications, students should write: Commissioner, Western Regional Commission for Higher Education, Care of Chancellor's Office, Eugene, Ore.

A selection committee appointed by the State Board of Higher Education will interview applicants and make recommendations to the Oregon commissioners for appointment.

Included in the criteria for appointment is permanent residence in Oregon, a grade average equal to or above the all-student average at the institution where the applicant completed his pre-veterinary work, physical fitness and a personal interview.

Preview of Seabeck Set for YW Today
