Scenery Gets 'Em

Why do distinguished speakers, such as Lester Pearson, come to the University? Not because of a huge fee, or even because of large audiences.

Oregon, it seems, has something to offer that overshadows both these things.

The attraction is the Oregon scenery. Lyle Nelson, whose job includes entertaining visiting firemen, explains it this way. Most of the speakers are men of means. A big fee doesn't mean much to them. But for a chance to view Oregon's scenic spots, they are willing to travel a few thousand miles out of their way. Of course, this is no small boon to the University.

Edward Weeks, editor of the Atlantic, caught two salmon in the Umpqua. Arnold Toynbee said the highlight of his trip West was a picnic lunch on the rim of Crater Lake. The Rev. Robert McCracken, last spring's commencement speaker, extolled the beauties of Oregon from his New York pulpit.

Sir Richard Livingstone said that if he lived in the U. S., he'd want to live in Oregon. James M. Pope, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, liked the coast.

This is good public relations for the state, and for the school. But it isn't all beer and skittles, so to speak.

The sunshine and the Pacific didn't perform perfectly for Pearson last Sunday. And when Nelson took Hugh Masters, president of the Kellogg foundation, deep sea fishing, Masters caught a beauty—the only catch of the day — but Nelson got seasick.

Webfoots Fly To Palo Alto

Baseball Coach Don Kirsch and eighteen players of his Northern Division champion baseball team took off for Palo Alto early this morning for the Pacific Coast Conference baseball playoffs, Friday and Saturday.

Oregon earned the trip southward by edging out Oregon State by a slim half game in the ND pennant chase. The three final games between the Beavers and Oregon were rained out, thereby giving the Eugene nine the title, though they had missed four contests.

After the Oregon team lands at San Francisco Airport this afternoon, it will motor to Stanford Village where it will spend Friday and Saturday. The locals will be back in Eugene Sunday morning. Oregon's traveling squad is one of the youngest in conference history, with eleven sophomores. The only seniors are Co-Captains Jim Livesay and Earl Averill.

The Oregon team consists of: catchers — Averill and Neil Marlett; pitchers — Norm Forbes, Stan Dmochowsky, Bill Blodgett, Trent Huls and Jack Pyle; infielders — Don Hedgepeth, Jimmy Johnson, George Shaw, Pete Williams and Bob Wagner.

Outfielders are: Livesay, Don Sigmund, Ron Phillips, Bernie Averill and Jim Archer.

The Ducks will play first Friday at 3:00 p.m., and again Saturday at 1:00 p.m. If a third game is needed to decide the championship, the two clubs vie again later Saturday afternoon.

Petition Due Friday For Chairman Post

Petitions are due Friday for chairman of the 1953-54 ASUO exchange assembly committee.

Petitions are also due at this time for the exchange assembly executive committee consisting of the chairman and four members. This group will sponsor exchange assemblies at Oregon colleges and high schools in the coming year.
